PATENTED AUGUST 23, 1853.

The undersigned having purchased the right to manufacture this Alcohol for the Atlantic States, would invite the attention of the public to the subjoined certificate of Drs. HAYES and JACKSON, State Assayers of Massachusetts, attesting to its superiority over any other Alcohol for purity. The eminent standing of these geutlemen, as chemists, will entitle their representations to the fullest confidence.

tbeir representations to the fullest confidence.

The attention of Physicians, Apothecaries, Perfumers, Daguerreotypists, Chemists, &c., is particularly called to this important discovery.

This alcohol has been extensively employed in preserving fruits, with complete success. Fruits thus prepared equal the best foreign BRANDY PRESERVES.

Reduced, it makes an agreeable bathing spirit, so often used in sickness, as it does not possess the unpleasant odor existing in Rum or ordinary Alcohols.

In order to prevent the strong alcohol extracting the coloring matter of the wood, the casks will be glued, but care must be taken not to reduce the alcohol in such casks, as water will dissolve the glue, and render the liquid turbid.

C. H. GRAVES.

BOSTON, July 1, 1858. 35 Hawkins Street.

We have made a chemical examination of the Alcohol manufactured in the large way, by the new process invented by Mr. Luther Atwood, which has for its object the removal of fusil oil and other odorous bodies, which exist in common alcohol.

Our comparisons were made with the hest "Cologne Alcohol," by exposing the samples to the action of chemical re-agents, and the result was that while we found "Cologne Alcohol" to he impure, the Alcohol of Mr. Atwood's process was perfectly free from the oils and other bodies, and more nearly pure than any other alcohol manufactured in the large way.

It is admirably adapted to medicinal and pharmaceutical purposes, the preparation of perfumery, and for other uses, in which an inodorous alcohol is required.

In the manufacture of Chloroform and Ethers it has a special value, as its freedom from oils and other alcohols prevents the formation of the chlorinated products and foreign compounds which commonly exist in Chloroform and Ethers, as now found in the market.

We regard Mr. Atwood's method as an important improvement in the manufacture of

GRATE BAR RANDALL SKELETON

Patented Feb. 9, 1869.

TESTIMONIALS.

A. O. CORBETT. Dear Sir:—The Randall Skeleton Grate Bars, purchased of you in October last, have been thoroughly tested by us under our eighty horse power boiler, fire surface of which is five (5) feet in length by four (4) feet in width. The bars have not sprung or warped in the least, but have proved to our entire satisfaction. In regard to the economy of fuel, we think they are superior to any bars now in use.

Yours, &c.,

BRIGGS & ROBINSON

A. O. CORBETT. Dear Sir:—I have used the Randall Skeleton Grate Bar in three large boilers connected with the St. James Hotel, for some six months, and with entire satisfaction. I consider they possess many advantages over any article of the kind with which I am acquainted.

JOHN H. KAZAR, Engineer St. James Hotel.

PORTLAND, Jan 9, 1869.

A. O. CORBETT. Dear Sir:—Yours of the 4th inst. is at hand. You wish information in regard to the Randall Skeleton Grate Bar. I have used them in one furnace, on the Steamer John Brooks, for eight months, and I like them very much; they are as good now as when I put them in. They give better draft, and burn the coal up cleaner, and make less ashes than any other bars; but as for saving fuel I cannot say, for I did not weigh our coal, but I think they do not burn as much as the old bar. I like them so well that I am going to have a full set when I start again, and so is the Steamer New England.

Yours truly. Yours truly,
F. M. FOOTE, Chief Eng. Str. John Brooks.

BOSTON CUSTOM HOUSE, Jan. 14, 1869. A. O. CORBETT. Dear Sir:—In answer to your inquiry how the Randall Grate Bars work, I will say, I have used them nearly a year, and they are as good to-day as when put in. I consider the very best recommendations that can be given of them none too good.

Yours truly,

H. ROBERTS, Engineer.

INTRODUCTION.

THE first number of the Boston and Eastern Railroad Directory is presented to the public, with the assurance that it will be received with favor by the business men represented in it, as well as by others who may have occasion to refer to it. That it will be valuable to the merchants and manufacturers of Boston is evident, from the fact of its giving a local circulation to the business of Boston for a distance of more than a hundred miles through a populous and growing section of New England, embracing many of the manufacturing cities and towns, and all the seaports, from Boston to Portland.

It also brings into notice the business and business men of all the cities and towns on the route — each city and town being complete in itself, with a sketch, and business directory, thus showing at a glance the business facilities, etc., of such city or town. This is the first time a work so extensive has been undertaken in this section of the country, compiled on so comprehensive a plan; and from the flattering encomiums which we have received from some of our first-class merchants, who have examined the proofsheets, we have no doubt a new era will be established in compiling and publishing Business Directories.

We have been engaged for the past fifteen years in compiling and publishing directories of the principal cities and towns in New England and the West, including Boston, Chicago, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Louisville, Indianapolis, Milwaukee, Directory of the Mississippi River, etc., etc., and we intend issuing no works from our establishment that are not reliable, and up to the times in every respect.

The labor of canvassing, and in fact all other departments of the work, have been so much greater than was at first anticipated, that its publication has been unavoidably delayed somewhat beyond the time originally set for its issue; while this on many accounts is to be regretted, still we feel it has, on the other hand, increased its thoroughness and accuracy.

To our patrons for their liberal support and encouragement, and to the many friends who have furnished information to our agents, we extend our heartfelt thanks.

Respectfully,

W. A. GREENOUGH, JR.

BOSTON.

"Bostonia Condita, A.D. 1630:"—So runs the legend on the city seal. Further information is contained in the words, "Civitatis Regimine Donata, A.D. 1822." We suppose by this that a single inhabitant does not constitute a settlement, for we are told that the Rev. William Blackstone, whom Mather calls "a godly Episcopalian," built a house near what is now called Spring Lane, as early as 1626. In 1634 fifty acres of land were assigned to Mr. Blackstone, who is described as "the first European inhabitant." All his "right and title to the peninsula of Shawmit," was not long afterwards purchased of Mr. Blackstone by the inhabitants for £30, each freeholder paying six shillings or more.

John Winthrop, the first governor of Massachusetts, with his company of emigrants, after tarrying a while in Charlestown, crossed the river and located on Shawmut peninsula, being attracted thither by the abundance of pure water. The name Shawmut, it is said, significs

Living Fountain.

During the first twenty years of the settlement,—that is, until as late as 1650,—the most populous part was on Washington street, between State and Eliot streets, including the cross streets on either hand. Elm street, the upper part of Hanover street, and the north side of Sudbury street were also occupied. Here in the centre of the city the business began, and here the most influential characters dwelt. The first house of worship stood near the corner of State and Devonshire streets, the first store was on the north corner of State and Washington streets, and the first market place was where the Old State House now stands.

The peninsnla on which Boston proper stands, comprised within its natural limits about seven hundred acres of land, connected with the main land by a narrow neck on the southeast. This neck was low and marshy, and sometimes overflowed at high tide. This isthmus or neck is about one mile long, and until 1786, that is, 156 years after the settlement of Boston, was the only passage into the town. It has been graded and widened until what was originally only a narrow neck is wider than the whole peninsula formerly was. Numerous broad avenues lined with elegant stores and residences now "connect Boston with the main land."

"Boston," says William Wood, writing in 1633, "is two miles northeast of Roxbury. Its situation is very pleasant, being a peninsula, hemmed in on the south side by the bay of Roxbury, and on the north side with Charles River, the marshes on the back side being not half of a quarter of a mile over, so that a little fencing will secure their cattle from the wolves. The greatest wants are wood and meadow ground, which never were in this place, being obliged to fetch their building-timber and fire-wood from the islands in boats, and their hay in loyters; it being a neek and bare of wood they are not troubled with these great annoyances, wolves, rattle-snakes and mosquitos. Those that live here upon their cattle, must be constrained to take farms in the country, or clse they cannot subsist; the place being too small to contain many, and fittest for such as can trade into England, for such commodities as the country wants, being the chief place for shipping and merchandize.

"This neck of land is not above four miles in compass, in form almost a square, having on the south side at one corner, a great broad hill, whereon is planted a fort which can command any ship as she sails into the harbor within the still bay. On the north side is another hill, equal in bigness, whereon stands a windmill. On the northwest is a highmountain with three little rising hills on the top of it, whereof it is called the Tramount. From the top of this mountain a man may overlook all the islands which lie within the bay, and descry such ships as are on the sea-coast. This town, though it be neither the greatest, yet is the most noted and frequented, being the centre of the plantations, where the monthly courts are kept. Here likewise dwells the This place hath very good land, affording rich cornfields and fruitful gardens, having likewise sweet and pleasant springs. The inhabitants of this place, for their enlargement, have taken to themselves farm-houses in a place called Muddy River [Brookline] two miles from the town, where there is good ground, large timber, and store of marsh land and meadow. In this place they keep their swine and other cattle in the summer, whilst the corn is in the ground at Boston, and bring them to town in the winter."

The Common, the pride and boast of every Bostonian, had its inception in those early days, its object being then, as now, the advantage of the whole people. We find the following vote under date March 30, 1640: "Henceforth there shall be no land granted, either for house plot or garden to any person, out of the open ground or common field which is left between the Sentry hill and Mr. Colburn's end, except three or four lots to make up the street from brother Robert Walker's to the round marsh."

This was the origin of Boston Common, which, scanty as their precincts were, the fathers of the city, with a wide foresight and regard for public welfare, secured to the enjoyment of all its future inhabitants. This beautiful plot of ground covers an area of about fifty acres. One of its greatest charms is in the diversified natural surface which it presents, and which those to whom its care and embellishment have been intrusted, have had the good taste to obliterate as little as possible. Its well-graded malls, its majestic clms, some of them over a hundred years old, its numerous paths intersecting in all directions, beautifully graded, and adorned by noble shade trees, indigenous and foreign, all combine to make Boston Common one of the most delightful promenades in the world. The whole is enclosed by a costly iron fence one mile two hundred and seventeen yards in length, with elegant granite gateways at two of the opposite angles, and foot passes at convenient distances all around.

Near the centre is a beautiful little pond, "ye ancient Frog Pond," out of the midst of which a fountain throws a massive jet d'eau ninety feet into the air, and anon changes to a fan shape, and again to many other pleasing forms. The Brewer Fountain near Park street mall, donated to the city by Gardner Brewer, the well-known dry goods merchant, is a magnificent specimen of bronze statuary. At its base are the four life-size figures of Neptune, Amphitrite, Atis, and Ehalatea, reclining in various graceful attitudes. Four smaller figures are at the top. It was cast in Germany, and put in place during the summer of 1868. The famous "Old Elm," of historic renown, though shattered by storms, and weakened by the weight of more than two centuries, still stands near the Frog Pond, an object of interest to all.

As a field for military parade, civic processions, and grand commemorative banquets, the Common has an honorable record. On gala days, in pleasant weather, it presents a joyous and animating spectacle. The people of the city, and of the country for many miles around, the native born and the adopted citizen, young men and maidens, old men, matrons and children, the rich and the poor, the merchant and the mechanic, the day laborer and the lord of thousands, here meet, each with equal claim to all its advantages and privileges, under the mutual restraints of self-respect, courtesy, and decorum, and in the conscious enjoyment of a dignity and happiness which fall to the lot of the peo-plc of no other country.

The Public Garden is an extension of the Common beyond Charles street, and occupies about twenty-five acres. It was formerly an unsightly marsh, but the hand of art has changed it into a lovely spot, with tastily arranged walks, a fine artificial pond, on whose smooth surface boats may sail, and over which is a bridge where pleasant views may be obtained, parterres of shrubs and flowers, numerous fountains, elegant statuary, and a conservatory. The equestrian statue of Washington is a finely modeled and elaborate work on the south side of the Garden, facing Commonwealth avenue. Near by is an exquisite statue commemorative of the discovery of the use of ether to prevent pain in surgical operations. It was presented to the public by Thomas Lee, as was also the granite statue of Alexander Hamilton in Commonwealth avenue.

Boston is at the present time agitating the project of a new and more extensive Public Park which shall be commensurate with the expanding growth of our city. The most magnificent scheme of this kind which has yet been broached contemplates a continuous park from the heights of South Boston through Dorchester, Roxbury, West Roxbury, Brookline and Brighton, to Charles River, and eventually perhaps through Cambridge, Somerville, Malden, Everett and Chelsea to the beach. A park by this plan, of convenient width, would have the advantage of being easily accessible at some point by all the inhabitants. Whether this or some more compact form be adopted, it is evident that something of the kind must be done before many years to meet the increasing wants of this thriving community.

Let us look for a moment at the growth of Boston territorially. The original area of Boston proper was a little short of seven hundred acres; as much more has been added by filling up flats. In 1804, March 6th, nine hundred acres were added by annexing South Boston. The East Boston company was incorporated March 25, 1833, for the improvement of "Noddle's Island"; this contained, with improvements since made, about eight hundred acres. At this time there was but one family on the island; now it is a large and prosperous community. By the annexation of Roxbury January 6th, 1868, the city acquired 2,184 acres; and by Dorchester, January 3, 1870, 4,533 acres, — making the total area of Boston as at present constituted, with the fillings now in progress, about 10,000 acres.

To a hasty observer the statement of the population of Boston conveys a very inadequate impression of the real size and importance of the place. Before the annexation of Roxbury and Dorchester the area of Boston was 3,170 acres; that of New York 14,502 acres; of London 74,070 acres. The population of London to the acre is forty; of New York, fifty-six; of Boston, seventy-two.

It is interesting to note the growth of the city in population at various periods. Thus in 1765 the population was 15,520; in 1776, it appears by the last state census report, the population had shrunk to 12,719; in 1790 it had recovered to 18,320; and after this there is a steady increase of thirty to forty per cent each decade up to 1830, when there is an increase of fifty-two per cent. making the population in 1840, 93,383. By the census of 1865 the population is stated at 192,318. It is probable that the census of the present year (1870) will show, including the recent acquisitions, a total of not less than 250,000. It is calculated that, at the present rates of increase, this number will amount to 550,000 in the year 1900.

The crookedness, narrowness and general irregularity of our streets furnish food for mirth to "outside barbarians"; but these same scoffers, when once well acquainted with the city, acknowledge it is a very convenient place to get about in. Even this complaint will soon lose its validity. It was never true of the newer parts of the city, and is rapidly becoming a thing of the past with the older. Within a few years large sums of moncy have been expended in widening, straightening and extending our streets. In 1722 there was only one street, now Washington, but then called Orange, over Boston Neck to Roxbury, beyond Bennet street; now numerous broad avenues extend that way, and the building lots thus brought into market are being rapidly covered with dwellings and stores of the most costly and elegant description. While these improvements have been going on at the South end, the older parts of the city at the North end have not been neglected. North street, once almost wholly given up to thieves and vagabonds and the vilest of the vile, is now largely occupied by respectable wholesale firms, and presents an appearance very different appearance from the North street, of a dozen years ago. straightening and widening of Devonshire street have greatly improved the business facilities and consequently the value of property in its vicinity. The widening of Tremont street beyond the New Masonic Temple was in accordance with the general plan of improvements in that section. The elevation of the Church street district was found necessary for sanitary purposes, and remedied a defect long and painfully felt by the residents there.

The widening of Hanover street during the years 1869-70, was a much needed improvement, and, though costing a large sum, will doubtless prove a good investment in the increased valuation, and will most certainly be highly appreciated by each one of the three thousand who daily pass through the street on their way to and from Chelsea Ferry. The Fort Hill improvement, which includes the building of Atlantic avenue, is going rapidly forward. Atlantic avenue is to extend from Broad street at Rowe's wharf, to Commercial street at Eastern avenue. It is to be one hundred feet wide, and is estimated to cost $1,200,000. The removal of Fort Hill, the dirt from which is used in filling the avenue, is estimated to cost $1,250,000. Thus one historical landmark after another gives way to the march of improvement. Fort Hill, once a residence fit for, and occupied by, the very élite of the city, by the mutations of trade, degenerates; its once fashionable parlors, where wit vied with beauty, and gallant speech brought smiles of pleasure to lovely lips, become the abode of poverty and filth; and anon, at the inexorable behest of commerce, its squalid tenants in turn move on its lofty top is brought low, stately warehouses filled with costly merchandise rise in majestic proportions on its site, and Fort Hill becomes a memory of the past.

The limits of this sketch preclude a detailed notice of all the various schemes for the improvement and enlargement of our city. Suffice it in this connection to say, that no one who takes a walk through our streets, even in what are called dull times, and takes note of the old buildings of wood or brick torn down to make way for noble piles of marble and granite which vie in massiveness and architectural beauty, with the most pretentious of any city, can fail to be impressed with the idea that somebody has faith in Boston, in her unchecked growth and in the prosperity and greatness of her commerce.

By studying the eensus reports we find some curious facts in reference to the gradual concentration of wealth and population in Boston and vicinity. Thus, comparing the population of the whole Commonwealth for the one hundred years ending 1865, we find the aggregate increase has been 431.14 per cent., while in the County of Suffolk it was 1,202.79 per cent.

The territorial centre of the State falls within the limits of the city of Worcester, on the easterly side, near Quinsigamond Lake, but a north and south line passing through this geographical centre, would have 75.99 per cent. of the entire population on its easterly side, while a north and south line which exactly divides the population would pass through Cambridgeport at a point midway between Harvard University and the western end of the West Boston bridge, less than two miles from the State House. An east and west line, dividing the population in the same way, would intersect the South Boston end of the Federal street bridge, only about one mile from the State House.

A large proportion of the residents of the surrounding cities and towns, resort daily to Boston for occupation, and, therefore, the increase of the population and resources of the city of Boston, can only fairly be measured by the growth and resources of the cities and towns in the immediate neighborhood jointly with those of the city proper. find in the limits of Boston one-seventh of the population of the State, nearly one-half (44.06 per cent.) of the personal property, and more than one-third of the real estate. The cities and towns within ten miles of Boston contain more than one-sixth of the population of the State, nearly one-sixth of the personal property, and a fraction more than Including Boston and the cities and one fifth of the real estate. towns within ten miles, we therefore have about thirty-two per cent. of the population, sixty per cent. of the personal, and fifty-four per cent. of the real estate. More than one-half of the population, seventenths of the personal property, and two-thirds of the real estate, are situated within a distance of twenty-five miles from the State House.

This condensation of wealth and population has existed from the very first, showing that Boston is in truth the metropolis. A circumscribing circle, drawn from the State House as a centre, and containing exactly one-half the population of the state, would have had a radius in 1765, of less than thirty miles; in 1800, of less than thirty-five miles; n 1810, of thirty-four miles; in 1820, of thirty-two miles; in 1830, of thirty-one miles; in 1840, of twenty-nine and one-half miles; and in 1865, a fraction of less than twenty-five miles.

The periods of greatest decennial increase in the population of Suffolk County which is made up of Boston, Chelsea, North Chelsea, and Winthrop, was from 1830 to 1840, and 1840 to 1850. In the first period it was 54.06 per cent., in the second 50.89 per cent.

The great impulse given to the population and business of Boston and vicinity during this period is attributable to the inception and completion of various railroad enterprises, and also to a general condition of prosperity throughout the State; the percentage of increase in the State from 1840 to 1850, being 34.81, a much higher percentage than in any other decade either before or since.

The first railroad in this country was completed in 1827. three miles in length and extended from the Granite Quarries in Quincy to the Neponset River. It was quite a different affair from the railroads of the present day. The rails were of wood, iron-bound, and laid upon a stone foundation. It was operated by horse-power. The first steam railroad was the Boston and Lowell, twenty-five miles long. The rails were at first laid on stone sleepers; but these were soon replaced by wood which was found to be more economical, and better adapted to obviate the jar of the machinery.

This road has now a double track all the way through. Its large and increasing business demands greater freighting facilities, and recent legislative action permits it to take possession of about eight acres of land contiguous to the present depot. The new depot will cover about two and a half acres of land lying immediately west of the present depot buildings, will be about seven hundred feet in length, and one hundred and fifty fect in width, and will prove a great architectural ornament to that section of the city. When this improvement is completed the facilities of this road will be equal to any in the city. Boston and Lowell railroad was opened for travel June 24, 1835.

During this same year the Boston and Providence railroad was opened: it is a double-track road, and has a very large local traffic, and also connects through by rail and steamboats to New York.

The Boston and Maine railroad was opened to Andover, 1836. Station in Haymarket square. Its depot is a very fine brick building, and by recent enlargement is very commodious.

The Eastern Railroad was opened to Salem, sixteen miles, August 27, 1838. It gives railroad facilities to all the seaport towns on the The track is double to Beverly, eighteen miles. The branch to Marblehead, once the second town in Massachusetts, was opened Dec. 10, 1839. The Gloucester branch was opened Dec. 1, 1847.

Other branches extend to Danvers, South Reading, and Amesbury Mills. This is one of the best appointed roads running out of Boston. The officers are up to the times, and ready to adopt all improvements that may add to the safety of the road and the comfort of their patrons. The managers have recently put down the patent safety switch which is so constructed that the train will not leave the track whether the switch be placed right or not. The officers of the road are uniformly polite, gentlemanly and accommodating, and the trains proverbially on time. The new bridge over the Merrimack at Newburyport is a triumph of engineering skill, and will well repay the time and expense of a visit.

OLD COLONY AND NEWPORT railroad was opened Nov. 1845; it has through connections by the Fall River Line of boats to New York.

The Boston and Albany road is one of the most important passenger routes to the West, but its supremacy in this respect will be put to a severe test by the Fitchburg when the Hoosac Tunnel is bored through. The Fitchburg double track all the way, 50.93 miles. Their depot is one of the finest structures of the kind in the city: it is of unhewn granite and is very strong and massive in appearance. It stands on Causeway street near Charlestown bridge.

The Boston, Hartford and Erie railroad is a new enterprise, and is not yet completed, but is believed by its friends to be an important avenue for freight and particularly for Pennsylvania coal. It is completed for local traffic to Woonsocket, thirty-six miles, and to Southbridge seventy miles. The depot is at the foot of Summer street.

These eight trunk lines have numerous branches which bring the whole surrounding region, a distance of twenty-five miles, within easy and rapid communication with Boston, and thus make this whole section tributary to the business and wealth of the metropolis. Numerous horse-railroad and omnibus lines extend through the principal streets and to points at convenient distances outside of the city, rendering the various points of interest in and around the city easily accessible. Chelsea Beach may be reached by crossing the ferry and taking horse-cars beyond, by taking the car at Scollay's Building, or by the trains over the Eastern railroad.

MOUNT AUBURN, that beautiful "City of the Dead," is one of the loveliest spots to be found, and teaches the thoughtful observer many a lesson of the pomp and vanity of life, and the certainty of death. The view from the top of the tower is charming, surpassing in many of its elements those of the State House, and Bunker Hill. It is reached by horse-cars from Bowdoin square, and by the Fitchburg cars. There are other beautiful cemeteries in this vicinity, among the most noted of which we may mention Forest Hills Cemetery, by the recent annexation of Dorchester brought nearly within the territorial limits of the city. Passing through the gateway which is at least one hundred and fifty feet in width, and under the grand portico of Egyptian architecture, we enter these beautifully planned and decorated grounds. The cemetery is laid out with wide walks and avenues, which wind through the vales and over the hills in the most picturesque and artistic way, and the rare natural scenery, adorned and beautified by art and the display of an exquisite taste, renders this one of the loveliest spots, for its purpose, yet fashioned by nature, or improved by the hand of man. Its rich and costly monuments, its placid lakes and shady groves, its stately trees and velvety lawns, its birds and blossoms, its mossy rocks and leafy bowers, all combine to make Forest Hills Cemetery the most delightful place for a stroll, that the contemplative lover of quiet beauty can anywhere find.

The drives in and around Boston are peculiarly fine. There is indeed no road leading from the metropolis which does not afford something to interest and attract, but there are some which are especially esteemed for a drive. The Brighton Road perhaps, all things considered, is the best and most popular. Passing out through the Western avenue (Mill Dam), a beautifully smooth and even road, we shall find, at any season of the year, in pleasant weather, that others have preceded us. In winter this is the fashionable drive, and during the tontinuance of sleighing there is a perfect carnival enjoyed with inense gusto by all who own or are able to hire a "three minute nag." In the summer the varied scenery keeps one constantly on the alert; gay equipages, filled with laughing, chatty ladies and gleeful children, contribute to the liveliness of the animating scene, and the "twoforties" appear in their best estate, and strive, "purely for the glory of it," to outdo each other in speed.

The drive around Chestnut Hill Reservoir is a magnificent one.

Those who delight in sea breezes and ocean views and the musical ripple of the waves close to their feet, and a smooth, sandy road left firm and hard by the receding tide, will find all these in perfection at Chelsea Beach. There are numerous other points of interest, which although beyond the municipal limits, still are part and parcel of the city's belongings, and designed for the enjoyment of her eitizens!

We can give a few of them only a brief mention. "Fresh Pond," surrounded by a splendid old forest, is a beautiful large sheet of water opposite Mount Auburn, and is a favorite resort for our citizens. Large quantities of ice are cut from its surface every winter. Pond," Stoneham, is eighty feet above the general level of the surrounding country, lying in a basin formed by the hills that flank the town of Melrose. Near by is "Wyoming Dell," one of the quietest, most enchanting spots in all New England. Huge old pines stretch their umbrageous limbs overhead entirely across the path, and the passage through the cool shadow of this dense grove, or forest, is very grateful to the senses of the care-worn, dust-laden citizen.

Of public buildings, public institutions, literary, scientific, historical, charitable and correctional, Boston has so large a number that we shall only attempt to give an account of some of the most noted,

The Public Library supplies a need which had long been felt. first definite step in reference to meeting this want, was taken August 5, 1850, by Hon. John P. Bigelow, then Mayor of the city, who gave one thousand dollars for the purpose of establishing a public library. The money, the first devoted to this object, was funded by the City Council, and a committee on the library was appointed and directed "to proceed with as little delay as possible to carry into effect the establishment of a free public library.

The next donation for this purpose came from Joshua Bates, Esq., of London, whose early life was passed in Boston; he offered to the city the munificent sum of Fifty Thousand Dollars towards the purchase of books for a library, if the city would erect a suitable building for the purpose; and, accordingly, on the twenty-fourth of February, 1853, an order was passed authorizing a conference of the Library Committee and the trustees, in reference to a suitable site for the desired building. The committee purchased 23,380 feet of land on Boylston street, opposite the eommon, upon which an elegant and commodious edifiee was erected at a cost, including land, of $365,000.

The building was finished and delivered into the custody of the City Council, and by them transferred to the care of the trustees of the public library, with appropriate ceremonies, January 1, 1858.

Other donations of money have been made, to the amount of over $40,000, $30,000 of which was by Hon. Jonathan Phillips. These sums have been funded, and the proceeds applied to the purchase of new books. Valuable donations of books have been made to the library by various parties, so that now it is one of the largest and most valuable in the country.

The Lower Hall now contains over 28,000 volumes; the Bates Hall more than 118,000; these numbers are increased by daily additions.

The Reading Room contains seats for one hundred persons, and has by far the largest and best collection of American and foreign periodicals in the country. Its privileges are free to all. As the city grows larger, it is in contemplation to establish branches of the library at various points so that its privileges may be brought more readily within the reach of all our citizens.

Thus it is seen that Boston believes, and wisely acts upon the belief, that it is better to put books in the way of her people, and inculcate if possible a love of reading, than to leave them in their hours of leisure a prey to the seductions of vice and crime, and the thousand and one temptations which beset the vacant mind.

An organization of kindred purpose with the Library, but having for its special object the moral elevation of the young men of the city, was organized December, 1851. It is called "The Boston Young Men's Christian Association," and was the first of the kind in the United States. Its membership is 2,000. Its Free Reading Room is one of the pleasantest places in which a young man can spend an evening. The Association tries to throw around the friendless stranger the kindly influences of sympathy and help, and among other good offices affords those out of employment facilities for obtaining work, and thus keeps them from being robbed by the so-called employment brokers.

For nearly twenty years the Association has occupied the whole front of Tremont Temple, up one flight. The rooms are visited by about 150,000 persons annually. There are now something like six hundred of these Associations in the United States, having a total membership of 75,000. Eleven of these occupy buildings of their own, which cost $750,000. The Boston Y. M. C. A. propose to erect a building for its own use, on Newton street as soon as the necessary funds can be obtained; it is expected to cost $250,000.

The Boston Young Men's Christian Union was incorporated in 1852, and continued in successful operation until the commencement of the late rebellion, when, owing to the departure of many of its most active members, and the engrossing demands of the war, it was deemed expedient to suspend its work. In the spring of 1868, measures were taken to revive its energies; and the work began anew with the opening of rooms at No. 12 West street, corner of Washington street.

The Rooms of the Union as recently enlarged and dedicated May 12, 1869, include the entire building, 300 Washington Street, above the first story. The Reception Room on the first flight, and in front, is devoted to conversation and games, and is supplied with boards for parlor eroquet, chess, checkers, backgammon, etc. Connected with this is the Library and Reading Room, which is supplied with a library of about twenty-three hundred volumes, and with the leading newspapers and periodicals. These rooms are open every day, including Sundays, from 9 a.m., to 10 p.m., and members are always in attendance to welcome and introduce strangers, to give information, and to contribute to the enjoyment of those present.

On the flight above is the Hall of the Union, which, with the gallery is capable of holding about four hundred persons, and has every convenience for lectures and entertainments. On the same floor is the chapel or lecture room, which will seat about two hundred persons.

The upper story is fitted up for a Gymnasium, to which members of the Union will be admitted on the payment of a moderate sum.

Besides these there are several spacious Committee and Class. Rooms, Bath Room, etc.

The general objects of the Society, are: -

1st. To furnish a place of pleasant resort for the young men of Boston and vicinity, where the surrounding influences will be of a beneficial and elevating character.

2d. To provide them with opportunities for self-improvement at little or no expense.

3d. To enlist in active, benevolent and charitable work all those who are willing and ready to do good.

Classes are formed for the study of the Bible, Vocal Music, French, Mechanical Drawing, Shakspeare, History, Elementary English, etc., and for Debate and Light Gymnastics. Religious meetings are held; and frequent Lectures, Readings, Musical and other Entertainments given.

Measures are taken to aid young men, particularly those from the country, in obtaining good boarding places; to assist them in any practicable manner in getting employment; to furnish seats in the different churches of all denominations, for such as desire a regular place of worship tree, or at moderate expense; to provide teachers for Mission and Sunday Schools that may be in need of them; and in other ways to accomplish some practical good.

It is the duty of the Board of Directors to induce the members of the society to connect themselves with some one of the religious societies in the vicinity, according always to their denominational preferences, and especially to seek out and impart information and render aid, assistance and encouragement to those who come as strangers to the city, striving to guard them against temptation, to surround them with Christian influences, and to interest them in the cultivation of a religious life.

This institution being wholly unsectarian in its character, all persons, and particularly all young men, are earnestly invited to co-operate in the accomplishment of its purposes.

The fee for Annual Membership is one dollar; for Subscription Membership, five dollars; for Life Membership, twenty-five dollars.

The Lowell Institute, is one of the most munificent institutions in Boston. By a legacy amounting to about $250,000, John Lowell, Jr., Esq., provided for the maintenance of public lectures of the highest order which are to be free to all citizens. The ample income of the Institute secures the best lecturing talent in the country and the fullest means for illustrating the topics treated. The lectures are given Tuesday and Friday evenings, in a spacious audience room in the rear of 233 Washington street.

The Mercantile Library Association — the senior of all similar intitutions in this country—was founded in 1820, for the intellectual imrovement of young men engaged in mercantile pursuits. Its rooms No. 32 Summer street are very spacious and convenient. A large number of newspapers from every quarter of the globe is constantly on file, and a choice selection of American and foreign reviews and magazines can be found on the table. The cost of membership is only two dollars per annum.

The Massachusetts General Hospital occupies an open plot of ground of about four acres, near the Charles river. The premises decorated with ornamental trees and shrubs, and laid out in gravel walks, give an air of comfort and a pleasing appearance from without. The building is of Chelmsford granite, two hundred and seventy four fect long, and fifty-four wide. It is richly endowed and ably managed.

The new City Hospital is on Harrison avenue, opposite Worcester square. This Hospital is intended for the use and comfort of poor patients, to whom medical care will be provided at the expense of the city. The building is an elegant structure, the situation light and airy, the surroundings pleasant and healthful, and the whole an honor to the city, and to the Samaritan spirit which dictated its erection.

The EYE AND EAR INFIRMARY is on Charles street. The building is of brick, sixty-five feet front by forty in depth, and is devoted entirely to the benefit of the poor and unfortunate; no fees are accepted for aid rendered in this excellent establishment.

The Massachusetts Medical College is a branch of Harvard College. It accommodates about three hundred students, has many excellent models and manikins, a valuable surgical apparatus and library. The "laboratory" is memorable as the room in which Dr. Webster, a Professor in Harvard University, murdered Dr. Parkman of Boston.

The Perkins Institute for the education of the blind at South Boston, was incorporated 1829. The school was commenced by Dr. Sam-UEL G. Howe, in his own house, with six blind young scholars. Their progress was so great that universal interest was excited, and public and private donations flowed in so rapidly that the institution increased in reputation and funds and soon became an unparalleled success. The chief benefactor was Hon. T. H. Perkins, who presented a valuable building in Pearl street. In this institution, for the first time in the world, deaf, dumb, and blind persons have been taught to read and write, and express thought in common language. The most interesting case is that of Miss Laura Bridgman, born at Hanover, N. H. Dec. 21, 1829. In infancy she was a very sprightly pretty child, but a violent disease destroyed sight and hearing. When about eight years old she was visited by Dr. Howe, and removed to the institution; she could not see a ray of light or hear a sound, and her sense of smell, it she had any at all, was very imperfect. Through her solitary sense of touch, the light of knowledge was let in upon her mind. She receives communications on the palm of her hand, and her answers seem to fly like electric sparks from the ends of her fingers.

Another institution, also, under the superintendence of Dr. Howe, was established for training and teaching idiots. This has been in successful operation since 1848.

Among the buildings of historical interest, the most noteworthy are Christ Church (Episcopal) on Salem street, built in 1723. It has a chime of eight bells, each of which has an inscription, one of these is as follows, "We are the first ring of bells cast for the British Empire in North America. A. R. 1744." The initials A. R. are those of the founder. The OLD SOUTH is the next in point of age. It was opened for worship April 26, 1730, and is the sueeessor of two wooden ones on the same spot. Here Warren, in defiance of the threats of authority, and in the presence of marshalled soldiery, delivered his fearless oration on the anniversary of the Boston Massacre. Here were held many meetings of oppressed freemen, and the walls cehoed to the peals of patriotic eloquence which moved the whole country, and shook the British throne.

This ehurch was descerated by the British troops when they held possession of Boston; the interior was dismantled, the floor covered with earth to make a riding school for the troopers, and large portions of its very valuable historical library, collected by a former pastor, the Rev. Thomas Prince, used for kindling fires. It has been restored to its former style, and still stands a venerated specimen of the elegance of ancient times, and a sacred shrine of patriotic and religious memories. The annual election sermon is delivered before the Governor and General Court in the Old South. In a house which formerly occupied the lot nearly opposite the Old South, on Milk street, Ben Franklin is said to have been born. An inscription on the building now standing there, marks this as the reported birthplace of the philospher.

Federal Street Church, some years since torn down to make way for business, was eelebrated as the place where the Federal Constitution was adopted; this eircumstance gave name to the street, which had previously been ealled Long Lane.

The old "Cradle of Liberty," Faneuil Hall, still stands in Faneuil Hall square. This edifies was presented to the town of Boston by Peter Faneuil in 1742; it is one hundred feet long, eighty feet wide, and three stories high. The hall is seventy-six feet square and twenty-eight feet high, and with its deep galleries on three sides affords standing room to about 6000 persons. It is decorated with the busts and portraits of the fathers of American liberty, who once thundered within its walls, and of others who led our armies to battle. Patriotic associations of unfading power cling to this memorable hall, and will while American liberty endures.

The OLD STATE HOUSE at the head of State (formerly King) street is a fine type of the architecture of a century ago. On this spot was the seat of government of Massachusetts for one hundred and forty years. The present edifice was built in 1748. Its use for State purposes was discontinued in 1798, when the Capitol was established on Reseon Hill.

The present State House occupies a most elevated and commanding position, giving character to the view of Boston from whatever direction approached, and affording from its lofty cupola very fine views of the harbor and the surrounding country. The site, called in the deed "Governor Hancock's pasture," is one hundred and ten feet above the sea. The edifice is seventy-three feet front and sixty-one feet deep, and the height to the lantern on the top of the dome one hundred and ten feet. The State library and all the State offices are here. The apartments are commodious and fitted up in clegant style. In the rotunda are various war relies of the Revolution, busts and portraits of eminent men, and hundreds of torn, battle-stained flags, borne in honor from the battle-fields of the Rebellion. On the right as you descend the steps is the bronze statue of Horace Mann, on the left that of Daniel Webster.

Brattle Street Church is connected with the memory of the Revolution. During the evacuation of Boston by the British troops, a cannon ball from our guns at Cambridge struck the brick wall over the front doorway of this church. The ball fell to the ground, but was picked up and is now a fixture in the wall. Hon. Edward Everett was at one time pastor of this church.

Scollay's Building, the horse-railroad centre of the city, is on Court street, opposite Tremont. It is said that 2500 cars pass this building every twenty-four hours. From this point cheap and ready conveyance to any part of the city or suburbs can be found at all hours of day or evening.

Faneull Hall Market, sometimes called Quincy Market, one of the largest and best buildings for the purpose in the country, was built during the mayoralty of Josiah Quincy, 1823 – 1828. It is five hundred eighty-six and three-quarters feet long and fifty wide. North Market street on the one side is sixty-five feet wide, and South Market street on the other is one hundred and two feet wide. The lower story is occupied by market stalls, wholesale and retail, the upper story is one vast hall, so arranged as to be divided into compartments for warerooms, when not wanted for fairs or exhibitions of mechanical and agricultural products.

The United States Custom House is a massive granite structure in the pure Grecian Doric style externally, and admirably adapted internally for the transaction of governmental business and the "receipt of customs." Its foundations rest on 3000 piles; the building is one hundred and forty feet long and seventy-five feet in width. It was commenced in 1837, and finished in 1849, at a total cost of $1,076,000. The form is that of a Greek cross, surmounted by a dome the top of which is ninety-five feet above the ground; the entire roof to the sky light, including the dome, is of granite tile.

The new City Hall, an elegant and very tasty edifice, fronts upon School street, just below the old King's Chapel, of pre-revolutionary memory, and open to the rear upon Court square close by the Court House. It is of New Hampshire granite, and was completed late in 1865. It is highly ornamental in the design and style, and a credit to the city whose officials it convenes.

A Telegraphic Fire-Alarm Apparatus, by which news of a fire and its location may be instantly conveyed to the central office, in City Hall, and thence to as many of the Engine Houses and Fire Companies as may be deemed necessary, has been in operation a number of years, so that now, large fires are infrequent, and in fact almost impossible.

Recent experiments have also demonstrated the feasibility of lighting and extinguishing the street lamps, by means of electricity. These experiments have been so far successful and satisfactory, that it is probable some apparatus for the purpose will be placed in the city, ere long.

The Masonic Temple, recently erected on Tremont street, corner of Boylston, is the property of the Massachusetts Grand Lodge of Masons. This truly magnificent temple is the most superb specimen of architectural beauty to be found in the Commonwealth. The lower floor is oc cupied as a carriage mart on one side and by the Home Savings Bank on the other. The hall above is fitted up with all the magnificence of drapery, splendor of adornment and richness of detail, which is characteristic of the most perfect good taste, acting in conjunction with unlimited resources. Emblems, regalias, paintings, legends, portraits and statues, meet the eye in rich profusion on every hand. The Masonic Fraternity may well be proud of this noble hall which is devoted to the use of the Grand Lodge, Encampments, Chapters, and Lodges of the State. The old Masonic Temple next to St. Paul's church, was for a time occupied for piano fortes by Jonas Chickering, but is at present used by the U. S. District Court and by the officers for the U. S. District of Massachusetts. It is a substantial edifice of fine proportions

Boston Music Hall is an ornament to our metropolis, and an index of the taste and liberality of our citizens. The exterior is plain and without any attempt at display; the expense being reserved for the interior. The hall is one hundred and thirty feet long, seventy-eight wide, and sixty-five high, being constructed with special reference to the science of acoustics, a consideration of the utmost importance. The orchestra will accommodate four hundred persons. The floor is arranged with seats for fifteen hundred persons, and the balconies give room for one thousand more. The Big Organ, an instrument of extraordinary power and excellence, and in some important respects the largest and best in the world, has been placed in this hall. It belongs to the Music Hall Association, was placed in position in 1863, and is listened to by admiring thousands at every opportunity. It has a richness, depth and compass of tone that makes it equally adapted to the joyous wedding march, the lively waltz, or the solemn dirge.

One of the most striking objects to the eye of a stranger as he comes into the older business parts of the city is the Sears Building, an elegant edifice, of Tuckahoe marble, white and gray mixed together. It is of the Italian Gothic style, eighty feet high, and covers 11,000 feet of land including basement and apartments under the mansard roof, there are six stories which are conveniently reached by an elevator. It is occupied by banks, insurance offices, treasurers of corporations, railroad offices, etc. It fronts on Washington street fifty-five feet, and on Court street one hundred and fifty feet. The total cost, including cost of the site, was in the neighborhood of $750,000. Another very fine marble building on State street opposite the old State-House, is, as we write, nearly completed externally. The front is highly ornate and imposing in appearance. It is to be devoted to banking and similar purposes.

The Commonwealth Hotel, the most recent acquisition of Boston in the way of hotels, is an immense structure just opened, designed we believe more especially for a family hotel, though prepared to accommodate transient custom; it has a very long frontage of beautiful white marble, is fitted up in lavish style, and is a great ornament to the South end. The lower story is occupied by some of the handsomest stores in the city.

The St. James Hotel on Franklin Square has been opened to the public but about two years. Its location and surroundings are very pleasant. By means of horse-cars, etc., it is readily accessible from all parts of the city. This house contains one of the largest and most approved passenger elevators ever erected. The new Post-Office Building now in process of erection between Water and Milk streets, and fronting on Devonshire street, will be, when finished in accordance with the present design, most convenient and perfectly adapted to its purpose. All the improvements which experience can suggest for the prompt transaction of mail business will be adopted. Besides the business of a general Post-Office, the building will accommodate the United States Sub-Treasury, the United States Courts, Assessors and government officials generally, except such as pertain to Custom-House business. The building is to be of granite and iron, with special regard to strength and safety, and thoroughly fire-proof in all its parts. As we write, the foundation is pretty well advanced and many of the iron posts which are to support the first floor are already in position. It will cost a large sum of money, and doubtless be a long time before the finishing touch is put upon it; for government works proverbially move slow.

Perhaps the most noteworthy manufacturing establishment is

CHICKERING'S PIANO-FORTE MANUFACTORY.

This building, fronting on Tremont street, occupies an entire square between Camden and Northampton streets, two hundred and fifty-four feet front by two hundred and sixty-two in depth, covering an area of 52,000 feet, and enclosing a square in the centre of 28,000 feet. It is five stories high in front, and six in the rear. In its construction there were used 3,000,000 bricks, 2,000 perch of stone, 2,500 casks of lime and cement, 1,650,000 feet of lumber, and three hundred casks of nails: the floors cover an area of twelve acres, and there are nine hundred windows, containing 11,000 lights. The building is heated by steam and lighted by gas, for which purposes eleven miles of piping are used. The manufactory was in full operation January 1st, 1855. The pianos manufactured here are well known and widely esteemed as the very best that can be made. Messrs. Chickering & Sons, at the Paris Exposition in 1867, received the first grand prize, The Legion of Honor, for their pianos, making seventy-four first premiums during the past forty-six years.

S. E. Chubbuck & Sons, at No. 971 Tremont street, manufacture steam engines, machinery and boilers, steam heating apparatus, etc., etc. They have also a patent piston which is very superior. Their work is made satisfactory in quality, and done on the most favorable terms.

Boston's most recent acquisition in the amusement line is Selwyn's Theatre, a fine edifice of beautifully colored granite, fronting on Washington street, with a side entrance on Essex street. It was opened to the public in October, 1867, and has met with very flattering success; it takes rank as the leading theatre of the city. "For what it professes to be, this theatre is without a rival, and occupies and fills a place quite exclusively and peculiarly its own." Its present high position has been attained, and will doubtless be retained, by the efficient management of J. H. Selwyn, who knows just how to cater to the taste of an amusement-loving public.

"Howard Atheneum" is the old stand-by for fun. This theatre is snug and warm in winter, cool and airy in summer. The management is up to the times; their combinations are rich, rare, and racy. The performances are full and ample, and constantly attended by a large and appreciative audience.

Of Boston's importance commercially the following summary of foreign shipping will give some idea: —

The number of vessels arrived at this port from foreign ports during the year 1869, was as follows: Steamships, one hundred and twenty-nine; ships, one hundred and fifteen; barks, three hundred and ninety-nine; brigs, seven hundred and seventy-three; schooners, 2,024. Total, 3,440. The total number of arrivals during 1868, was 3,079. The excess during 1869 over 1868, was three hundred and sixty-one, which shows a good year's business.

Boston contained May 1, 1869, of course not including the recent Dorchester annexation, 51,195 taxable polls; the real estate valuation for taxing purposes was $332,051,900; personal property, $217,459,700; total, $549,511,600; rate of tax, thirteen dollars and seventy cents per $1,000.

Of the men who by their energy and enterprise have made Boston the prominent, influential and prosperous city that she is,—of her public schools, the pride and boast of New England, the model and envy of the whole country,—of the leading part she took in the war of the revolution, in furnishing men and material for crushing the rebellion, and in every other crisis in which the honor of our country, and the liberty and safety of our people were involved—and of her forwardness in every good work to elevate her own citizens and benefit mankind, we have not deemed it necessary to speak except incidentally. These are all too well, too widely known to need mention here. They are a part of the country's history.

In conclusion we cannot do better than to quote from the address of Hon. Josiah Quiney at the bi-centennial celebration of the settlement of the city.

"As our thoughts course along the events of past times, from the first settlement of Boston, they trace the strong features of its character indelibly impressed upon its acts and in its history — elear conceptions of duty; bold vindications of right; readiness to ineur dangers and make sacrifices in the maintenance of liberty, civil and religious. Early selected as the place of chief settlement of New England, it has, through every subsequent period, maintained its relative ascendancy. In the arts of peace and in the energies of war, in the virtues of prosperity and adversity, in wisdom to plan and vigor to execute, in extensiveness of enterprise, suecess in accumulating wealth, and liberality in its distribution, its inhabitants, if not unrivalled, have not been surpassed by any similar society of men. Through good report and evil report, its influence has at all times been so distinctly seen and aeknowledged in events, and been so decisive on the destinies of the region of which it was the head, that the inhabitants of the adjoining colonies of a foreign nation early gave the name of this place to the whole country; and at this day, among their descendants, the people of the whole United States are distinguished by the name of 'Bostonians.' Amidst perils and obstructions, on the bleak side of the mountain on which it was first cast, the seedling oak, selfrooted, shot upward with determined vigor. Now slighted and now assailed, amidst alternating sunshine and storm, with the axe of a native foe at its root, and the lightning of a foreign power at times seathing its top or withering its branches, it grew, it flourished, it stands - may it ever stand - the honor of the field."

WALKER'S FURNACE.

This Furnace is constructed upon a new and improved principle. The products of combustion pass across the upper and lower domes in such a manner as secures economy of fact and a more equal distribution of heat to their surfaces. Its spacious shifting chamber and receptacle for ashes make it very desirable in this respect. It is provided with double self-packing joints, thus avoiding the escape of gas and dust. The form of its surfaces insurfaces in a capal expansion (a great desideratum), as it prevents the opening of joints and warping.

We hope it will be your pleasure to examine this Furnace before purchasing another kind.

The Cheapest, Simplest, Safest, and most Efficient Arrangement known.

This Furnace will be found on examination, to combine in itself all the good qualities requisite for Warming and Ventilating Buildings of all classes.

More effective radiating surface is obtained in this, than in any other Furnace.

Its peculiar construction is such that all the heat of the fuel is radiated into the Air Chamber, and passed into the Building, while the funnel remains comparatively cold. No arrangement of flues can be more simple and economical.

It has a Shaking and Dumping Grate, which turns completely over, insuring perfect ease in clearing the Fire Pot.

The joints are adjusted perfectly, so that the escape of gas or smoke into the Hot-Air Chamber is entirely prevented.

This Furnace has two descending Drafts, which distribute the heat over the entire radiating surface equally. They are so arranged that the smoke or discharge pipe may be taken from either side at pleasure, without reducing the heating power.

The Draft is effectively controlled by the Regulator, which is adjusted to any degree of heat required.

The arrangement of tubes is such that a very large amount of Cold Air is passed through the radiator, thus affording a volume of Hot Air not obtained from any other Furnace.

This arrangement also enables us to warm rooms at remote distances, without being obliged to close the Registers in rooms near the Furnace. This improvement will be appreciated by those who have had experience in warming buildings with Furnaces of the ordinary construction.

The perfect evaporation of water imparts an atmosphere pure and perfectly healthful, overcoming the dry parched air which is so injurious to health and comfort.

We warrant these Furnaces to give entire satisfaction, and are prepared to set them in Town or Country.

The following are a few of the many Testimonials we have received:

LAWRENCE, Sept. 7th, 1869.

Messrs. Moses Pond & Co., -

Gentlemen: The No. 12 Imperial Furnace I got of you and put in my house last Fall has given perfect satisfaction. After Twenty years experience I pronounce it the best heating and most economical furnace in use.

Yours truly,

ROBERT HAUGHTON.

Winchendon, Mass., March 25, 1869.

Messis, J. P. Barber & Son, -

Gentlemen: The Imperial Furnace you put into my house last fall, has on trial, given the most entire satisfaction; in fact, it combines everything in a Furnace. It has a good draft, burns wood or coal perfectly, no smoke or gas. It is very economical of fuel, and best of all, the air, as heated by it, is pure, soft, and agreeable; in fact, it works to my perfect satisfaction.

Yours truly,

G. M. DOANE.

ASHBURNHAM, April 6th, 1869.

Messrs. Moses Pond & Co., -

Gentlemen: We are pleased to state that the two No. 13 Imperial Furnaces you put into our Church, give us entire satisfaction, both as to heating, economy, and ease of management, and we shall be happy at any time to recommend them to any Church needing a heating apparatus.

Yours truly,

OHIO WHITNEY, JR.,

Chairman of Building Committee, 1st Congregational Church.

Size of Church, — 56 x 64, exclusive of Tower and Chancel, open into Church about 26 feet additional.

THIRD NATIONAL BANK, No. 31 South Street,

Baltimore, April 19, 1869.

Messrs. BIBE & Co., -

Dear Sirs: I take pleasure in saying that the Imperial Portable Heater put up by you in this Bank, has been in use during the past winter, and has given complete satisfaction.

It warms comfortably our main banking room, together with the Directors and Cashiers apartments.

It connects with five different Registers. I would cheerfully recommend it to those who desire a good Warm-Air Furnace.

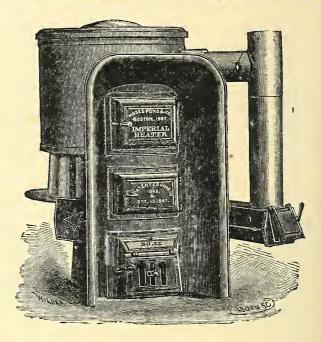

Yours respectfully,

A. M. CARTER, Cashier.

DIRECTIONS FOR USING.

After placing a sufficient supply of kindlings in the Fire Pot and opening the Draft-slide in ash pit door, open the upper or direct Draft-pipe Damper, and close the Regulating Valve at the base of the Smoke-discharge Pipe. When the coal becomes well ignited close the Direct Damper. Perfect control over the fire may be obtained by first closing the Draft-slide in the Ash-pit door, and then by raising the Regulating Valve if necessary.

CHELSEA.

This City was formerly a part of Boston, and now with Boston, North Chelsea and Winthrop forms the County of Sutfolk. The Indian name was Winnisemet, but the first settlers called it Rumney Marsh. It was incorporated in 1738, and in 1797 contained 472 inhabitants. It is situated northeast from Boston, and separated from it by Mystic River, at a distance of about a mile and a third across. Commodious ferry boats ply between the two cities every fifteen minutes during the day and evening; and a bridge, nearly a mile in length, recently made free, connects Chelsea with Charlestown.

For nearly a century this city was retarded in its growth on account of the difficulties attending getting to and from Boston; at the time of its incorporation, it required, with a team, a journey of twenty-four miles, although the distance across the water was less than one and a half miles. Within the past few years, and more particularly since the introduction of the Mystic water, Chelsea has taken a wonderful start, and now contains some 18,000 inhabitants, a large number of whom do business in the neighboring city of Boston.

The surface of the town is broken-into several beautiful eminences, affording delightful views of Boston, Charlestown, Bunker Hill, Medford, Lynn, Nahant and Boston Harbor. Powder Horn Hill, about one mile from the ferry, is 220 feet in height. The United States Marine Hospital is situated on a beautiful eminence near the Mystic River, and affords a comfortable retreat for sick and disabled seamen; and the Naval Hospital, just beyond, occupies one hundred acres of the most eligible land in the city, along the banks of the river, and is a pleasant home for our naval heroes, when long service and honorable wounds have unfitted them to continue the battle of life.

Among the more recent public improvements may be mentioned the new City Hall, the Carter School-house, the fountain in Broadway Square, and the Soldiers' Monument at Union Park. The monument is to be enclosed by a neat fence the present summer. It is also in contemplation to grade and fence the park, lay out walks, grass over the surface, plant trees, shrubs, etc. The new depot, erected the past year by the Eastern Railroad Company, close to the park, is a model in its way, and has added much to the comfort and convenience of those of our citizens who patronize the road; the public have shown their appreciation of these comforts by a patronage during the past year amounting to $2,000 per month.

Many of our older citizens were made painfully familiar with the saying, "Dead as Chelsea"; but this epithet is no longer applicable. Chelsea is a live city, having within its borders a few wealthy men, and a large number of the bone and sinew, who are the real stamina of a people, and the safe foundation for a healthful, vigorous growth.

As a place of residence, either for the man of business or pleasure, Chelsea is in every respect a very desirable location, as the access to it now is nearly, if not quite equal to that of the other neighboring cities and towns in the vicinity of Boston. Horse cars run every ten minutes through Charlestown, which, with the cars of the Eastern Railroad, and steam ferry across the river, carry immense numbers of people daily to and from the great metropolis.

The Public Schools in Chelsea consist of one High, three Grammar, and eight Primary. The Fire Department is composed of two Steamers, one Hook and Ladder, and three Hose Companies.

Chelsea is supplied with pure water from Mystic Lake, which lies partly in Medford, Arlington and Winchester. The water is taken from the Mystic Water Works of Charlestown. The ground was broken for laying the pipes July 11,

MERRIAM, Fire and Life

1867, and water introduced into the eity November 21, 1867. Total length of the street mains, 106,117 feet. There are eighty hydrants located in different parts of the city, for use in case of fires. A number of Drinking Fountains have been introduced in several public localities, which furnish an abundant supply of water for men and animals.

The Chelsea Public Library has been established since 1868, but was not opened to the public until January 1, 1870. It contains about 3,400 volumes. The Library and Reading Room are open every afternoon and evening, the latter being supplied with the leading American and English Monthly and Quarterly publications.

There are thirteen Religious Societics in Chelsea, viz: Two Congregational, two Baptist, two Methodist, one each of Unitarian, Episcopal, Universalist, Catholie, Second Advent, Christian, and Spiritualist. Besides these there are a number of benevolent and other societies, — The Chelsea Young Men's Christian Association, Winnisimmet Benevolent Society, Ladies' Union Relief Society, Chelsea Choral Society, several Masonic, Odd Fellows and Temperance Societies, Grand Army of the Republic, etc.

Among the principal business firms and corporations may be mentioned the First National Bank, Chelsea Savings Bank, Gas Light Company, Winnisimmet Company, Cary Improvement Company, Chelsea Woollen Mill, Magee Furnace Company, Chelsea Iron Foundry and Machine Shop, Chelsea Salt Works, Boston Elastic Fabric Company, Chelsea Oil Company, Bay State Fire Brick Works, Chelsea Brass Foundry, Chelsea Dye House and Laundry. The Eagle Varnish Works, Folsom, Pearl & Co. proprietors, located on Bellingham street, has lately commenced business for the manufacture of every description of Varnishes and Japans: Otis Merriam, dealer in Real Estate and Insurance Agent, and many other firms which are arranged alphabetically under business headings in the Business Directory of Chelsea.

Two enterprising newspapers are published weekly, the Chelsea Telegraph and .

Pioneer and the Mystic Press.

NORTH CHELSEA

Was separated from Chelsea and incorporated March 19, 1846, including what is now known as the Town of Winthrop, the latter being set off about 1852. The young people celebrate "Incorporation Day" by an annual ball, taking careful note of the number of the year of their Independence.

North Chelsea has about one thousand inhabitants. About one-fourth of the area is salt marsh; the rest of the soil is elevated, fertile, under a high state of cultivation, and is used largely for market-gardening; though previous to the introduction of steam-cars, milk was produced for Boston and vicinity.

There is but little manufacturing; one rope-walk, a brick-kiln in which are burned about 3,000,000 brick per annum, and a tide-mill for grinding grain, spices and snuff, complete the list.

It is, in fact, a purely agricultural community, and is consequently free from the vices of manufacturing places.

Chelsea Beach is one of the finest on the Atlantic coast, and is every year becoming more popular as a summer resort. It is three miles long, and affords splendid drives at low water, and excellent bathing when the sea is full. A number of hotels afford accommodation to visitors, who desire to stay and enjoy the cool breezes. Horse-cars run between Boston and the beach at short intervals through the hot weather; and the Eastern Railroad, in that spirit of accommodation which is gradually becoming the ruling principle of our railroad men, is this summer, we understand, to afford improved facilities for access to the beach, by making frequent stops at a point only eighty rods distant.

LYNN.

THE City of Lynn, a seaport in Essex County, was first settled in 1629, and incorporated as a town in 1630. The name of the town was changed from Saugus to Lynn in 1637. Adopted a City Charter in 1849. The name was received from Lynn Regis, a town in England. Its Indian name was Saugust.

The first iron foundry in America was erected in Lynn upon the banks of the Saugus River in 1643. Eleven years later, the selectmen of Boston gave an order to Mr. Joseph Jenks of the iron works "for an ingine to carry water in case of fire," the first made in the country. Here, also, were made the dies for coining the famous pine-tree shillings.

Lynn is pleasantly situated on the northern shore of Massachusetts Bay. It is nearly surrounded by water, having the Saugus River on the west, the harbor on the south, the ocean on the southeast, and a chain of large ponds or lakes on The streets are laid out wide, and the buildings neat, many being elegant and substantially built. Altogether it is one of the most flourishing and beautiful cities in New England.

The shores of Lynn are in the highest degree romantic, and Nahant, as well as the city itself, are both places of general resort during the summer season for people of wealth and refinement from all parts of the country, many of whom have

From the elevations in this vicinity, a most enchanting prospect is presented, comprehending the harbors of Boston and Salem, with their numerous islands; the spires and domes of those cities, and nearly the whole compass of Massachusetts Bay, with the Blue Hills and the outline of Cape Cod, stretching along the southern horizon. Jutting out into the sea a few furlongs, on the south of the town, appear the rugged cliffs of Nahant, and the hard, polished beach, leading to this far-famed watering place, appearing like a narrow foot-path of sand upon the

Lynn has risen to wealth and importance by the enterprise and industry of its people in the manufacture of shoes, particularly for which, more than any other city in the country, it is justly celebrated. The manufacture of ladies' shoes was commenced here before the Revolutionary war, and it is curious to observe the great changes that have occurred in the fashion and manufacture of that article.

"In olden times," says the Newburyport Herald, "ladies' shoes were made in Lynn of common woollen cloth, or coarse curried leather; afterwards, of stuffs such as cassimere, everlasting, shalloon, and russet; some of satin and damask, others of satin-lasting and florentine. They were generally cut with straps, for large buckles, which were worn in those days by women as well as men. Ladies' shoes, seventy years ago, were made mostly with white and russet rands, and stitched very fine on the rand with white-waxed thread. Some were made turn pumps, and channel pumps, all having wooden heels, called cross cut, common, and court heels. Then the cork, plug, and wedge or spring heels came into use. The soleleather was all worked with the flesh side out.

"Previous to the war of the Revolution, the market for Lynn shoes was principally confined to New England; some few, however, were exported to Philadelphia. Many individuals with small capital carried on the business in their own families. Fathers, sons, apprentices, and one or two journeymen, all in one small shop, with a chimney in one corner, formed the whole establishment.

"After the Revolution, the business assumed a different aspect. Enterprising individuals embarked in the business in good earnest, hired a great number of journeymen, built large shops, took apprentices, and drove the business. workmen shipped their shoes to the south; so that Lynn shoes took the place of English and other imported shoes. Morocco and kid leather, suitable for shoes, began to be imported from England, which soon took the place of stuffs. Roan shoes were now little called for; and the improvement of working the soleleather grain sideout was now generally adopted, making what is called duff bottoms. About the year 1794 wooden heels began to go out of use by the introduction of leather spring-heels. This improvement progressed gradually, until the wooden heel-making business, which was once a good one, was totally ruined."

The shoe business of Lynn in 1869 was more than that of any other city or town in the State, there being about two hundred manufactories in operation.

There are several points of interest in and around Lynn, among which are Egg Rock in the harbor, thirty feet high, from which can be obtained an excellent view of the harbor and surroundings; also High Rock, about three-fourths of a mile inland, near which the celebrated Moll Pitcher used to live. In this city, also, is one of the most striking evidences of mau's folly and superstition of that kind of persistence in one idea, which, when a man is right is called firmness, and when he is wrong, obstinacy. Here a man named Marble spent several years digging into a solid rock in vain pursuit of treasure.

Lynn is laboring under some disadvantages through the action of some of its land-owners. Many of the buildings are temporary wooden structures, standing upon leased land, and when the lease expires the building is moved, entailing expense upon the owners, confusion in the street numbers, and rendering destructive fires frequent. Within two years, Lynn has had two or three severe losses on this point, and has profited by them. Among the substantial structures recently erected may be mentioned Bubier's Block on Market street, and Frazier's Building, corner of Market and Summer streets. Each of these accommodates a number of the most wealthy and enterprising shoe firms. The new City Hall is a noble building, and worthy of a large and thriving community.

The introduction of water from Flax Pond last Fall for hydrant purposes has added materially to the security against large fires; and the use of a stonecrusher, which does the work of a hundred men in preparing the hard blue rock for road purposes, will soon make the streets all that can be desired; so that Lynn, always pleasant and attractive, is rapidly putting on the airs and conveniences of a large city.

The population of Lynn in 1765 was 2,198; in 1830, 6,138; 1840, 9,367; 1850, 13,615; 1855, 15,713; 1865, 20,800; and at the present time, 1870, about 23,000.

SWAMPSCOTT

BECAME a separate town in 1851, being previously a part of Lynn, which two years before had taken upon itself the honors and dignities of a city.

Swampscott is twelve miles from Boston by the Eastern R. R.; it extends three miles along the northern shore of Massachusetts Bay. The shore line is made up of three entire beaches; these are pleasant places of summer resort, and are much visited. There are many pleasant summer residences here, and the town is already a favorite watering-place.

Fishing is the main business, though the trade is now somewhat smaller than some years ago.

There is quite a fleet of pleasure yachts, which are in active use during the warm season. The churches and schools of Swampscott are a credit to the enterprise and liberality of its citizens.

There is also a Swampscott Watchers' Society for the Benefit of the Sick, and a Free Public Library in the Town Hall.

Among the most enterprising business men may be mentioned : -

D. P. STIMPSON, Humphrey street, corner of Blaney, where may be found choice groceries at all times, and fruits in their season.

INGALLS & FOSTER, at 121 Humphrey street, have constantly on hand the best of tea, coffee, sugar, etc.; also fishing tackle and fishermen's outfits.

JAMES A. MOTT, No. 51 Humphrey, will supply hats, caps, clothing, etc., to all in need, of good quality, and at reasonable rates.

SALEM

Was first known by the Indian name Naumkeag. The locality is however put down as Bastable in the first map of that section, perhaps from the abundance of Bass in the waters at that time. It was formerly much more extensive, territorially, than at present, the towns of Wenham, Manchester, Marblehead, Topsfield, Beverly, Middleton and Danvers having been taken from it at various times, ranging from May 10, 1643, to June 26, 1757.

It was settled in 1626 by Roger Conant, John Woodbury, and others, who had made an unsuccessful attempt to establish a "fishing settlement" at Cape Ann. It is not known precisely on what spot they settled, some authorities favoring the tongue of land now crossed by Bridge street; but more recent search among the old records gives good reason to suppose that the vicinity of Washington street is entitled to that honor.

The first church was established with Rev. Francis Higginson as pastor, August 6, 1629, he and others having landed on these shores six weeks previously. This was the first church organized in America.

John Winthrop, who afterwards became the first Governor of the Massachusetts colony, arrived with his company June 12, 1630, but remained only a short time, when they removed to Charlestown, and subsequently to Boston.

John Endicott and his company had arrived about two years previously.

Incorporated as a town, June 29, 1629; as a city, March 23, 1836. Salem has a world-wide notoriety as the place where the witchcraft delusion culminated in a white the bloomer has belief, a white the wh have concentrated and spent itself. Hundreds were accused, arrested and tried; many were condemned, and about twenty executed.

The house in which the trials took place is still standing, at the corner of Essex and North streets: the place of execution is known as "Gallows Hill."

As showing the simple customs of those early times, it may be mentioned that in 1695 John Ruck gave to his son Thomas a homestead, by taking hold of a twig in the garden, and saying in the presence of witnesses, "Here, son Thomas, I do before these two men give you possession of this land by turffe and twigg." This method of transferring land seems to have been practised even after written deeds were given, the latter being regarded as supplementa to the former.

The history of Salem is identified with that of Massachusetts. In point of wealth and commerce, it has never ranked lower than second in New England. Its rank, its facilities for commerce, and the character and number of its population, made it early and seriously thought of as the capital, instead of Boston. Its commerce has been very widely extended. Hardly any part of the world has been left unvisited by Salem ships; the trade with the East Indies, in particular, was at one time large and profitable. No other port in the United States could compete with Salem in this. The first ship sent out on this trade was the Grand Turk, owned by E. H. Derby; she was in Canton in 1786, and returned May 22, 1787, under the command of Ebenezer West. In 1818 fiftythree vessels belonging to Salem, carrying 14,272 tons, were engaged in this trade. Many wealthy ship-owners and traders still live in Salem, but the cargoes are most of them now brought into Boston or New York.

Previous to the Revolution, fishing formed a prominent branch of industry; when the war broke out, it was an easy matter to turn the attention of the hardy fishermen to privateering; sixty armed vessels, manned by four thousand men, were fitted out from this port. These did good service in the war for independence, and upon the return of peace the same spirit of enterprise urged them into voyages of exploration to open trade with distant ports. A successful and extensive commerce was the result; the name of Salem became have came known, and her influence felt in almost every part of the globe.

Good roads and convenient means of communicating with other places were early seen to be of much importance to the prosperity of the new settlements. Accordingly, we find town lands sold at a merely nominal price, provided a good road was established and maintained through the property. In this way, from want of harmony among the various owners, and because their rights and powers were not always clearly defined, the roads were sometimes crooked and inconvenient; but the system was best available for those early times, and, as a whole, worked well.

February 26, 1803, an act was passed incorporating a turnpike company, — the road to extend from Salem to Charles River bridge, a distance of twelve miles and two hundred and fifty-six rods. The work was pushed rapidly forward, attracting much attention from the novelty of the enterprise, and was completed September 22d, following. The cost was about $250,000, divided into 1,200 shares. During the six years preceding the completion of the railroad, the stock paid dividends ranging from nine dollars and fifty cents to twelve dollars and twenty-five cents, per share per annum; during the next four, the dividends were four dollars to four dollars and fifty cents; and the stock was quoted at twenty to twenty-five per cent of its par value, and soon sank out of sight.

In April, 1836, a company was incorporated to build a railroad from Boston, through Salem, to the New Hampshire line; it being proposed also to extend the road under New Hampshire authority to Portsmouth; some additional legislation was found expedient a year later in regard to the route. The track was opened amid great rejoicing August 27, 1838.

The result was so satisfactory that three weeks later it was resolved to push vigorously eastward. The income of the road for the one hundred and eight running days succeeding the opening was $37,422.36; expenses, $17,818.19. This was wholly from passenger traffic; February 1, 1839, merchandisc cars, a new wonder, commenced running; during this year also the tunnel under Washington street, six hundred and fifty feet long, was completed; December 10, 1839, the branch to Marblehead was opened; December 18, cars run to Ipswich; road finished to Newburyport, June 19, 1840; to New Hampshire line, November 9, 1840.

In this enterprise Salem people took an active part, as they had always done in whatever promised to aid the growth of the city, or add to the comfort and convenience of her citizens.

One of the earliest efforts in this direction was the formation of the Salem & Danvers Aqueduct Co., March 9, 1797; the water was taken from Spring Pond; the company is still in existence.

Salem is preeminently distinguished for its literary and its charitable institutions.

"Plummer Hall," 134 Essex street, erected in 1856 from funds left by Miss Caroline Plummer, contains 40,000 bound volumes, besides a large collection of pamphlets.

"Plummer Farm School of Reform for Boys" is not yet in operation, but will be as soon as the funds, now amounting to $50,000, is deemed sufficient.

Its object is sufficiently indicated in the title.

"Salem Athenaum" was formed in 1810 by the union of the Social and the Philosophical libraries, the former organized in 1760, the latter in 1781; owns 13,500 volumes deposited in Plummer Hall.

"Essex Southern District Medical Society," possess about 1,000 books of reference on medical topics, for the use of physicians in the southern portion of Essex

MARBLEHEAD

SEEMS to have taken its name from the abundance of rock in the vicinity; it comes into notice first in 1629. Mr. Cradock, first Governor of the Massachusetts Corporation, not later than 1631, had here a fishing company.

A writer in 1633 gives this description of the place: "Marvil Head is a place which lyeth 4 miles full south from Salem, and is a very convenient place for a Plantation, especially for such as will set upon the trade of fishing. There was made here a ship's loading of fish the last year, where still stand the stages and drying scaffolds.'

Marblehead was incorporated March 12th, 1649, and at that time contained forty-four families. In 1674, the records show there were one hundred and fourteen householders. There are some singular points in the history of this place. Before 1720, there was not a carpenter, a tailor, a mason, or a butcher in town; their money, in consequence, was all carried out of town. There was not a single foreign vessel, although the town possessed good advantages for a free and extensive navigation; the people worked like slaves, and merchants of Salem, Boston, and Europe carried off the gains; the town was poor, and everybody in debt; the people were generally a rude, drunken, fighting crew; but, as they increased in numbers, they made improvement in social life, in virtue, and good morals.

Artificers and good workmen of every description came in, and, by the middle of the century, the people were refined, cultivated, and as remarkable for civility and hospitality as they had previously been for boorishness and rudeness.

This improvement was largely owing to their becoming conversant with the mysteries of trade. When once started in this direction, the town made rapid progress, and became one of the first trading ports of the bay.

In 1776, there were nearly forty ships, brigs, topsail-schooners, etc., engaged in foreign trade, and the town had become the second in the colony, both in population and in wealth; it swarmed with inhabitants, was a pattern of industry, and had a flourishing trade.

The hardy fishermen of Marblehead signalized themselves by acts of daring and deeds of valor in the Revolution. An entire regiment of 1,000 men, under the command of Col. Glover, was furnished from this place in 1775, many of whom lost their lives in the service. Five hundred of her sons were found at the close of the war in a single British prison; most of them had been thus shut up a long time.

The Revolutionary war and the embargo of 1812 had a most depressing effect upon the place. The suffering entailed by the former, and the utter annihilation of business by the latter, gave the town a blow from which it has never fully recovered.

The harbor of Marblehead is an excellent one, though somewhat exposed to storms; the break-water, built in 1845, however, renders it much safer than formerly. The topography of the town is remarkable; it may best be described as a succession of boulders. This makes the streets very irregular and crooked, but affords many charming sites for dwellings. Being elevated and surrounded by salt water, the place is remarkably healthy. The soil between the rocks is very productive; the crops are not only large, but mature early.

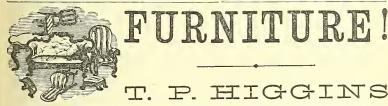

In 1772, the population was 6,015, from which number it fell as low, at one time, as 4,443; at the present time, the population is about 8,000.

At the beginning of the present century, more than one hundred Marblehead vessels, manned by about one thousand men, were engaged in fishing. In 1806, nearly 90,000 quintals of codfish were exported to the single port of Bilboa; but of late years, other branches of industry have claimed the attention of the people. Fifteen years ago, over one thousand males and nearly fifteen hundred females were employed in the manufacture of boots and shoes, the specialty being children's shoes; the value of these, in 1855, was $1,020,373. In 1865, the value was $767,218.

The schools and churches are in a flourishing condition.

Marblehead claims many eminent men among its former citizens. Gen. John Glover commanded a regiment all through the war for Independence, and was with Washington in the crossing of the Delaware on the memorable 25th of December, 1776. He also conducted the army of Burgoyne through New England, after its surrender. Hon. Azor Orne was a thorough patriot, devoting his time, talents, and property to the cause of independence; he died in 1796, aged sixty-five. Elbridge Gerry, born in Marblehead in 1744, was one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence; he was afterwards ambassador to France, Governor of Massachusetts, and Vice-President of the United States. Hon. Samuel Sewall was Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the State. These and others form a list of which Marblehead may well be proud.

T. P. Higgins has recently opened and fitted up a Furnishing Ware-Room on Pleasant street, opposite Academy Hall, where he is prepared to serve all who may favor him with their patronage as well, or better, than they can get accommodated out of town.

Would inform his friends and the public that he has taken the Factory of the late W.T. HAS-KELL, and, having fitted it up as a FURNISHING WAREROOM, now offers superior inducements for our citizens to partonize Home Industry and Enterprise. Here may be found

THE HOLMES STEREOSCOPE,

With the Inventions and Improvements added by JOSEPH L. BATES, 129 Washington Street, Boston.

BEVERLY

Was once known as Cape Ann Side, and sometimes, also, called Bass River. It seems to have been occupied as early as 1628, it being at that time a part of Salem. The inhabitants petitioned for a separate town, 1659, which was not granted until 1668, the people experiencing something of the "law's delays." Roger Conant and some others of the prominent citizens were not pleased with the name Beverly, alleging that it subjected them to the nick-name of "Beggarly," and desiring it might be changed to Budleigh, a town in England from which some of them had emigrated; but the petition was denied.

As in many other places, the people of Beverly suffered from a conflict of titles to their lands, an evil incident to the loose, and sometimes criminally careless, way in which the grants and transfers of land were made in those early times. These difficulties were settled, in 1700, by legislative enactment, by which it is to be presumed as even and exact justice was meted out as the nature of the case would admit.

The people of Beverly established the first lyceum in the country, and have always maintained an advanced standing on the temperance question; for many years, the sale of spiritous liquors was entirely suppressed. Here, also, was located the first cotton-mill in America. It was erected in 1788, near what was known as "Baker's Corner," and was visited the following year by General Washington, in his tour through New England.

Beverly was not at all behind her sister towns in devotion to the cause of Independence, or in sacrifices in the calamitous Indian wars from which the early colonists suffered so much. Captain Thomas Lothrop commanded a company of young men from this county, who, on account of birth and position, were called the "Flower of Essex"; these with their leader were almost wholly cut off by the Indians at Bloody Brook, in 1675. In 1769, when it began to be plainly seen that nothing but the utmost prudence could avert a struggle with the mother country, the people of Beverly charged their representative, Henry Herrick, to be firm but prudent in his opposition to all unconstitutional measures.

Three weeks before the Declaration of Independence, the people voted to support such declaration, if made, with lives and fortunes. On the nineteenth of April, 1775, the citizens promptly shouldered their muskets, and marched to the scene of conflict; valuable assistance was also rendered by privateering. In all the other struggles in which our country has been engaged, Beverly has borne a manful part. In the Great Rebellion, her Roll of Honor contains the names of ninety-nine of her sons who died in the service on land and sea.

The value of manufactured articles in Beverly for the year ending May 1, 1865, was $600,000, employing a capital of $150,000; giving work to about six hundred males and two hundred females. Of this value, $518,800 was in boots and shoes, of which there were made 382,700 pairs; capital, $84,500; hands employed, two hundred and ninety-four males, two hundred females. That these figures must be largely increased in the census of the present year the traveller will easily believe, if he notices, as he passes along in the cars, the large and elegant new shops, just east of the depot. A heel manufacturer said to the writer of this sketch, "Ten years ago, I, alone, and single-handed, could make all the heels used in this town; now, fifty men could not do it."

Whale-fishing employed two vessels, with a tonnage of two hundred and twenty, and a capital of $20,000; hands employed, twenty-five. Cod and mackerel-fishing vessels, twenty-four; tonnage, two hundred and fifty; quintals of codfish taken, 23,750; value $166,250; value of Cod liver oil, $18,630; capital employed, $130,529; hands, two hundred and forty-eight.

Total population in 1865, 5,942, of which four hundred and sixty were foreign born, and fourteen were colored.

The people of Beverly are well accommodated with railroad facilities, there being four stations, viz., Beverly and North Beverly on the main line; Beverly Farms and Pride's Crossing on the Gloucester Branch. North Beverly station is close by Lake Wenham, from which many thousands of tons of icc are taken annually. From this lake, also, Salem draws its supplies of water, a large engine being employed to pump the water from the lake into the reservoir.

There are eight Churches of the various denominations, a Masonic Lodge, two Temperance Societies, and a Public Library.

MANCHESTER.

WM. JEFFREY first occupied this place in 1628 for trade and fishing purposes: for this reason it was called Jeffrey's Creek. In 1640, seventeen persons to whom lands had been granted in this vicinity, were permitted by the General Court to erect a village. The leaders in this movement were Symon Bradstreet and John Winthrop, jr. The name was changed to Manchester, May 14, 1645, incorporated two months later. October 26, 1646, a committee was appointed to "forthwith lay out a way between the ferry at Salem and the head of Jeffrey's Creeke, and that it be such a way as men may travell on horseback or drive catle, and if such a way may not be found, then to take speedy course to sett up a foote-bridge at Mackrell Cove."

The surface of the town is rocky, but diversified; the harbor is large and well protected for vessels of any size, but the wharves are built down far enough only to accommodate those of one hundred and twenty tons burthen. A beautiful flowering-tree, called the Magnolia, is found in a sheltered swamp near the Gloucester line. It is about twelve feet high, and has deep green leaves and white blossoms, which are very fragrant; there are but few other places in New England where this tree is found.

Manchester has furnished many ship-masters and sailors from among its people, and has been noted for its enterprise in the fishing business;

but its glory in this particular has departed.

Many beautiful and costly summer residences have recently been erected on the sea-shore; the beach is said to be remarkable for a peculiar ringing sound under the wheels of carriages, whence it is called the "Singing Beach." It is believed there is but one other beach on the Atlantic coast possessing this peculiarity.

The town is remarkably healthy, and particularly free from pulmonary complaints. In 1865, out of a population of 1,643, there were thirteen persons over eighty years old: as high a ratio, it is believed, as can be shown by any place in New England.

Cabinet making is the principal business. By the latest available statistics, it appears there were seventeen establishments of this class, employing one hundred and eight hands, using a capital of $42,950, and manufacturing chairs and cabinet ware to the value of $92,625. The total value of all manufactures for the year, was about $150,000, giving employment to one hundred and fifty-two hands and $80,000 capital.

The churches are two in number, the Orthodox and the Baptist. The Silver Lake Lodge, I. O. of G. T., meet in Odd Fellows' Hall.

The Lyceum Library is opened every Saturday evening.

GLOUCESTER,

Until 1840, comprised the whole of Cape Ann peninsula, which is about eight miles long, and five miles wide. A number of small islands lie off the eastern point, a mile or two-from shore. On some of these are light-houses.

The harbor is capacious, easy of access at any season of the year, and the water is deep enough to receive the largest merchantmen; nautical men pronounce it one of the finest harbors on the coast.

Gloucester was called by the Indians Wingaersheek. Here was made the first attempt at a settlement on the north side of Massachusetts Bay, This attempt was not altogether successful; for, after a short trial, the adventurers removed to Salem. In 1635, August 14, "in the night, there came on as mighty a storm as perhaps was ever known in these parts of the world." In this storm, the Rev. John Avery perished, he, with his family, and that of his cousin, Mr. Anthony Thacher, and a few others, twenty-three persons in all, having embarked in a pinnace for Marblehead. Their vessel was driven upon a rock, and quickly broken to pieces. The unfortunates perished one by one, being swept off by the waves, except Mr. Thacher and his wife, who were miraculously cast upon the shore alive, though much bruised and exhausted. From this circumstance, the island was called Thacher's Woe, and the rock, Avery's Fall. This is remarked as the only vessel that miscarried "of all those great fleets which brought passengers into New England upon the pious and holy designs of the first settlements."

In 1639, Gloueester was incorporated as a "fishing plantation"; as a town, in 1642. The name seems to have been taken from Gloueester, in England. In 1638, there was given to every householder and man upwards of twenty-one years of age, who was a native of the town, and paid taxes, six acres of land. One hundred and twelve lots were thus given away.

"In 1692, that memorable year in the annals of mystery, many wild and extravagant stories are told of wonderful phenomena seen in Gloueester.

The people imagined they saw armed Frenchmen and Indians running about their houses and fields." These apparitions sometimes shot at the people; the bullets were heard to whiz by their ears, but none took effect. The alarm was so great, that two regiments were raised for their defence. The explanation of the phenomena is recorded by the Rev. John Emerson. He says: "All rationable persons will be satisfied that Gloucester was not alarmed for a fortnight together by Frenchmen and Indians, but that the devil and his agents were the cause of all that befell the town."

In August, 1775, Capt. John Lindzee, with the sloop-of-war Falcon, made a wanton attack upon Gloucester, because the inhabitants resisted his attempt to capture a schooner which had run into the harbor to escape pursuit. He had captured one just outside. The enraged Lindzee fired a broadside upon the thickest settlements, and, with blasphemous oaths, directed the gunners to aim at the "damned Presbyterian church." The plucky people resisted bravely, and soor recaptured both schooners, the cutter, the two barges, and the boat which had been sent out to make the attack, with all the men in them The loss on the American side was one killed, one mortally wounded and one slightly wounded. The British lost thirty-five prisoners; several were wounded, and one dead.

"Next day, Capt. Lindzee warped off with but one-half his men, — never a prize, boat, nor tender, except a small skiff." The inhabitants immediately set to work to build a small fort, to mount six nine-pounders.

When the Revolutionary War broke out, Gloucester put nearly three hundred men into the field, although her population was small. Many of these were at the battle of Bunker Hill.

Sept. 8, 1814, Gloucester was attacked by the British frigate Tenedos, at Sandy Bay, now a part of Rockport. The garrison, consisting of ten men, was captured, and the guns of the fort spiked. An alarm was sounded from the meeting-house bell. The enemy tried to silence the bell by firing upon the church; but, putting in a double charge, the recoil of the gun started the wood-ends of the barge, and she immediately filled. Her crew made for the shore, and thirteen of them were captured. Five of the Americans escaped by jumping overboard; no one hurt on either side. The guns at the fort were found uninjured, and were remounted. The barge had on board a carronade and a number of muskets, pistols, &c., which, together with the boat, were saved.

The business of Gloucester, like that of other towns in this vicinity, was prostrated by the war, and did not recover for years.

The village Annisquam, or "Squam," is on the north side of the cape, about five miles from Gloucester Railroad station; it has a safe harbor, and is frequented by fishing craft. Of late, there has been quite an extensive business carried on here in granite quarrying.

Opposite to 'Squam is the famous sand beach, between two and three miles in length, covered with white sand, which makes a beautiful appearance as one approaches the shore. The West Parish is a quiet country hamlet, occupied by tillers of the soil; some of the land is valuable for tillage, and some of it almost worthless.

There are locations in the immediate vicinity of the compact parts of Gloucester that cannot be surpassed for healthfulness and attractive scenery—fine beaches for bathing, splendid views of town and harbor, and fine rambles in the back-ground. Beacon Hill and Governor's Hill afford the most extended views of the Atlantic Occan. Vessels and steamers passing in and out of the harbor of Boston can be seen; and, by the aid of a good glass, these views may be made to include Ipswich Bay, Portsmouth, Newburyport, and a wide extent of scenery, making a panorama of unsurpassed beauty.

Gloucester is rapidly increasing in wealth and importance. In the fisheries she stands first in the world, and in foreign commerce ranks as third in Massachusetts. With one of the best harbors in the world, with the means of extending their business to any point, there is no reason why this town may not grow in commercial importance, and take a high rank among our cities.

Among the natural curiosities of the place may be mentioned the "Rocking Stone," at "'Squam Common," which is estimated to weigh more than one hundred tons, and yet so exactly poised that a child can rock it. "Dogtown Common" covers an area of several square miles, so heaped with loose boulders, large and small, as to afford neither sustenance or even footing for any useful animal.

The chief business of Gloucester is, and always was, fishing. As before stated, in this respect she stands at the head, and the only probable limit to her greatness in this direction is the not very probable exhaustion of the supply of fish at the banks.

In 1865, there were three hundred and forty one vessels engaged in cod and mackerel fishing; tonnage 24,450; bbls. of mackerel taken 154,938\frac{3}{5}; value, $2,198,562; quintals of cod and other dry fish taken, 113,028; value, $706,425; value of cod liver oil sold, $90,420; value of salt consumed, $230,025; capital engaged in the business, $1,865,700; hands employed, 4,590.

In addition to this, there were 7,000 bushels of shell-fish taken, worth $3,600, and $12,300 received for freights in the coastwise or carrying trade, making a total income of $3,003,307. Probably more than $2,000,000 of this was distributed in the form of wages.

The manufactures of Gloucester are, naturally, closely allied to her main business. Thus, in the year under consideration, there were made $9,000 worth of anchors; value of vessels built, $7,000; of boats, $3,800; of masts and spars made, $4,700; of sails made, chiefly from American fabric, $131,000; of copper paint, $6,000; of casks, $4,000. Other manufactures, $58,660.

The population of Gloucester, in 1865, was 11,937; of which 2,279 were foreign born; seventy were over eighty years old, six over ninety. The number of inhabitants entitles Gloucester to become a city, if she chooses to ask for a charter. This she will probably do before long, her large floating population—literally floating—requiring somewhat strict police regulations.

The Fire Department is large and efficient, consisting of two Steamers, five Hand-engines, one Hook-and-Ladder, and one Hose Company.

The Schools consist of oue High, six Grammar, four Mixed, and twelve Primaries. The total number of teachers employed is sixty-three.

The Unitarian Church, on Middle Street, was established 1642. The other Churches are, two Congregational, two Universalist, two Baptist, two Methodist, one Episcopalian, one Catholic, and one Mariners' Bethel.

The Gloucester Fishermen's and Seamen's Widows' and Orphans' Aid Society was organized 1862. Its object, preamble, constitution, and bye-laws are comprehended in its title.

The Ladies' Charitable Society, and the Seaside Band of Hope, are doing a good work, and doing it well.

There are two Masonic Lodges, viz: the Tyrian and the Acacia. Two of I. O. of O. F., viz: Ocean Lodge and Cape Aun Encampment; and eight Temperance Societies, viz: Fraternity Lodge I. O. of G. T., Riverdale Division S. of Temperance, Forest Lodge I. O. of G. T., Eastern Star Lodge I. O. of G. T., Mill River Lodge, Agamenticus Lodge, Neptune T. of H. and T., Neptune Council T. of H. and T.

There are three Newspapers, one Military Company, one Post G. A. R., two Cornet Bands, one Ferry Line, one Steamboat Line (Boston and Gloucester), two Stage Lines, one Railroad, Board of Trade, a Custom House, five Post Offices, etc. etc. Eastern Point Fort, located at Eastern Point, has ten guns.

Among the business men, we take pleasure in calling special attention to the names of I. C. Mayo, No. 107 Front Street, manufacturer of a new and improved Signal Lantern for ship use. It will not blow out.

F. M. Loring, No. 146 Front street, has a large and well selected stock of Tin Ware, Stoves, Furnaces, Ranges, &c.; also Glass, Britannia, Wooden and Hollow Ware.

Those who have occasion to get any House or Sign Painting, Graining or Paper-hanging, done, and those in want of Sashes and Blinds, will do well to call on Griffin, Call & Co., at 39 Washington Street.

SAMUEL K. FRIEND, JR., Carriage-manufacturer and Wheelwright, may be found on Spring Street, where he will be happy to see his friends and customers.

M. V. B. Perley has added Millinery Goods to his stock, and hopes to see all his old customers at his new place, 103 Front Street, and all others in want of Ladies' Furnishing and Fancy Goods.

E. L. Rowe, Sailmaker, has on hand, and makes to order, Sails, Tents, Awnings, Wagon-covers, &c. Friend's Wharf, foot of Pearce Street.

JOHN S. WEBBER may be found at Room 3 Union Block, Front Street, - Conveyancer, Civil Engineer, and Surveyor. Is accurate, prompt, and trustworthy.

ROCKPORT

Comprises all the seaward portion of the extremity of Cape Ann, with its islands and that portion of Gloucester long known as Sandy Bay, which opens to the sea on the northeast. Rockport was incorporated 1840. There are two villages, Sandy Bay and Pigeon Cove. The principal business is fishing and stone quarrying. At Pigeon Cove are almost inexhaustible quarries of excellent granite, lighter in color and somewhat harder than the Quincy granite. The quarries are so near the water that the stone can be put on shipboard at trifling expense. The harbors at both these villages are artificial, and large sums of money have been expended here by the national government.

The wild and rocky shores of this region, the romantic scenery, the cooling sea-breezes, and the sublimity of the ocean views, render this a charming summer retreat for the brain-weary, dust-choked denizens of our large cities.

In 1865, there were 37 vessels engaged in cod and mackerel fishing; tonnage, 1,386: bbls. mackerel taken, 6,970; value, $68,587.75; quintals of cod fish taken, 36,250; value, $133,250.30; value of cod liver oil sold, $22,300; value of salt used, $14,000; capital engaged, $32,000; hands employed, 349.

The five quarries prepared for market, $162,000 worth of building-stone; the capital used was $16,200; hands employed, 89.

The amount of manufactures, excluding the cotton mill, of which we have no returns, was $24,000. Capital $20,000. Hands employed, 46.

The Societies are the Ashler Lodge (masonic), Granite Lodge, I. O. of O. F.; Rockport Lodge, I. O. of G. T.; Northern Light Lodge, I. O. of G. T.; the Order of Rechabites, and the Young Men's Christian Association.

The fire department consists of three hand engines, viz., Pigeon Cove, Silver Grey, and Rotary. The churches are, one Congregational, one Baptist, one Universalist, one Methodist, and one Catholic. The schools are, one High, four Grammar, and four Primary, employing fourteen teachers, all females.

By the last census, Rockport had 3,367 inhabitants, of whom 1,700 were males, and 1,667 females; twenty-four were over eighty years old, three over ninety.

TARR & THURSTON, in Dock square, near Main street, deal in Fresh,

Dry and Pickled Fish, and do a commission business.

Howard Wheeler, Pigeon Cove, manufactures first-class oiledclothing, from the most durable material.

WENHAM & HAMILTON.

It is not known precisely when Wenham was settled. There seems to have been no assignments of land until 1637, though it is probable some of it was improved earlier. In 1638 two hundred acres were allotted to Francis Flemingham at Great Pond, now called Wenham Lake. About the year 1636 the Rev. Hugh Peters, minister of Salem, preached on the borders of this pond from the text, "At Enon, near Salim, because there was much water there." From this circumstance the place was at first called Enon. It was separated from Salem and incorporated into a township May 10, 1643.

The purity, clearness, and softness of the waters of Wenham Lake, are something remarkable. Large quantities of ice are annually cut and stored here for home use and for shipping; some specimens, it is said, have been taken out so clear, that one might see to read through a block of it thirty inches thick.

Hamilton, formerly a part of Ipswich, became a town by incorporation in 1793. There are several fine ponds within its limits, the largest of these is Chebacco Pond, the source of Chebacco River.

Like Wenham, Hamilton is devoted almost exclusively to agriculture, though of late Wenham has done considerable in the manufacture of boots and shoes, and will doubtless increase in this branch of industry. Both of these places are quiet, peaceful country hamlets. The Eastern R. R. depot is about equidistant from the two villages. Population of Wenham, nine hundred and eighteen; four are over eighty years old. Population of Hamilton, seven hundred and ninety nine.

IPSWICH.

This "ancient and honorable" town is said to have been the first place in Essex County that bore the foot-print of an European. Two men came here in 1611, but though treated kindly by the Indians, for some reason did not remain long. "This place," says Smith, the voyager, "might content a right curious judgment; but there are many sands at the entrance of the harbour, and the worst is, it is inbayed too farre from the deepe sea."

The Indian name was Agawam. In March, 1633, John Winthrop, Jr., with twelve others, commenced a settlement. They were joined a month later by a few others. The next year, the Rev. Thomas Parker, with about one hundred more, joined the colony, and it was incorporated by the name of Ipswich.

The Indian title to these lands was extinguished in 1698, by John Winthrop, jr., he paying to the Indian Sagamore Masconnomet, twenty pounds for that purpose.

In Ipswich records of those early times, we find evidence of some curious customs that would hardly harmonize with our present ideas of propriety and decorum. Thus, the funeral of Rev. Thomas Cobbett, 1685, cost the town £17–19s., besides clothing for the minister's family. "Among the articles provided, were thirty-two gallons of wine, a large quantity of cider, one hundred and four pounds of sugar, and about four dozen gloves." But this was moderate, for in 1739 we learn that the funeral of a respectable man cost at least ten times as much.

September, 1660, we learn that "Daniel Blake is fined five pounds for making love to Edmund Burk's daughter without her parents' consent." Four pounds of the fine was mercifully remitted, conditionally, we suppose, because of the young man's great temptation!

Ipswich has always responded promptly to the call of the country for men or money. Nathaniel Wade commanded a company of "Ipswich Minute Men," at Bunker Hill, at Long Island, at Harlem, and at White Plains.

The cause of education received early attention in Ipswich: a free school was established in 1642; a grammar school had been opened in 1636.

The Ipswich Female Seminary was organized in 1828. The Public Library contains about six thousand volumes, donated by the late Augustine Heard, Esq. It is kept in a neat brick edifice, centrally located.

The Ipswich river is the only stream of importance. It affords good water power and empties into Ipswich Bay and harbor.

A grist mill was crected in 1635, a saw-mill in 1656; a Lace Factory was started in 1824, but discontinued in 1828; another was incorporated in 1827, but closed up in 1833. The Cotton Factory erected in 1829 is still running under some modifications of its original design. The commerce of the place was once quite large. The manufactures amounted to about $250,000 in 1865. Population, 3,311.

ROWLEY

Was settled by Mr. Ezekiel Rogers, with about sixty families, in May, 1639, and incorporated in July following. The act of incorporation was brief and to the point. "Fourth day of the seventh month, 1639 - ordered that Mr. Ezekiel Roger's plantation shall be called Rowley." Johnson, speaking of the first settlers of Rowley, says they "were the first people that set upon making cloth, in this western world, for which end they built a fulling-mill, and caused their little ones to be very diligent in spinning cotton-wool, many of them having been clothiers in England." This was in 1643.

Vessels of thirty tons and more were built here, not in the usual way, at the water's edge, but near the homes of the contractors, and, after completion, were hauled to the river by oxen. One of ninety tons burthen was built on the common by Nathaniel Perley, and hauled a mile and a half to the river.

The manufacturing interests of Rowley are small, the chief articles being boots and shoes, of which over $50,000 were made in 1865. Both here and at Ipswich considerable business is done in digging clams and preparing them for the market.

By the last census, Rowley had one thousand one hundred and ninety one inhabitants, of whom five hundred and ninety eight were males, and five hundred and ninety three females; there were none under one year old; seventeen over eighty, and two over ninety.

NEWBURYPORT,

As first set off from the town of Newbury, contained but six hundred and forty-seven acres, lying along the banks of the Merrimack River, for a distance of about two miles. The site is a gentle acclivity, inclining evenly towards the river. The streets are regular, and lined with beautiful shade trees. Their sloping surface causes them to be washed by every rain, and they are, therefore, for the most part, elean, and free from either dust or mud. High street extends the whole length of the city; from this can be seen the wharves, the river, the harbor, Plum Island, and a magnificent panoramie view of the whole east from Cape Ann to the Isles of Shoals. Near at hand may be seen a large portion of the most beautiful parts of the city, with its numerous private residences, gardens, lawns, and landscapes. In the background we have a view of the surrounding country to a distance of ten miles inland. In the centre of the city there is a beautiful little pond, covering six acres. Newburyport is considered one of the most beautiful and healthful cities in New England. Out of a population of 12,976 in 1865, there were one hundred and fourteen over eighty years old, and nine over ninety.

This city was early noted for its commerce and ship-building, and became the principal seat of this branch of industry, the Merrimack River being famous for its ship-timber. The ships built here attained a high reputation both in the eolonies and in the mother country. In 1810, the ship-building seems to have reached its height, the vessels built that year amounting to 12,000 tons burthen, and there were said to be ninety vessels of various classes on the stocks at one time.

Newburyport furnished men and money liberally during all the wars in which our people have been engaged. A British ship, loaded with provisions for the British in Boston, was seized by seventeen men in an open boat, in the bay, — a very notable exploit, and requiring a good show of pluck.

The first privateer fitted out in the United States sailed from this port August, 1775, and was owned by Nathaniel Tracy, Esq. During the continuance of the Revolution, Mr. Tracy owned one hundred and ten merchant vessels, having an aggregate tonnage of 15,660, which, with their eargoes, were valued at $2,733,300. Twenty-three of these vessels took out letters of marque; they mounted 298 guns, and were manned by six hundred and eighteen men. Only thirteen of these vessels survived the war; the others were either taken by the enemy or lost. Mr. Tracy was also principal owner of twenty-four eruising ships, combining a tonnage of 6,330; earrying three hundred and forty guns and 2,800 men. Only one of these cruisers survived the war. But they were not ignobly surrendered; they captured from the enemy one hundred and twenty vessels, aggregating 23,360 tons, which, with their cargoes, were sold for $3,950,000. The prisoners captured were 2,225. Twentytwo vessels, manned by 1,000 men, sailed from Newburyport, and were never heard of more. A Newburyport vessel, the Count de Grasse, Capt. Nicholas Johnson, was the first to display the American flag in the river Thames.

Few places have experienced severer commercial vicissitudes than Newburyport. Its growth up to the time of the Revolution was rapid and vigorous.

After the close of the war, till 1807, there was not a more prosperous place in the Union. Its shipping amounted to 30,000 tons; its eommerce was extensive, and it had a large and profitable trade, especially with the West Indies. In the midst of this prosperity, and while the carrying-trade, owing to wars and dissensions in Europe, was at its best, the fatal embargo came, vessels were seized, or left to rot in idleness at the wharves; and ship-building, the very life of the place, was almost at a complete stand. Slowly recovering from this depression, it was again laid prostrate by the great fire of 1811, which burned over sixteen acres of the most compact and valuable portion of the city. laying in ashes two hundred and fifty buildings, and dissipating into thin air $1,500,000. Next year war was declared with England, bringing various evils in its train. The completion of the Middlesex Canal, diverting the Merrimack ship-timber to Boston, gave Newburyport a staggering blow. From this series of disasters, she has never fully recovered. Various enterprises have been started, but their success has been but indifferent at the best, and many have been disastrous failures; so much so that it must be a very promising enterprise indeed that could now tempt the people into a new venture.

The chief public buildings are the Custom House, the City Hall, and the Court House. There are sixteen church edifices, some of which are fine specimens of architectural beauty. Rev. George Whitfield's remains lie under the Federal street church; the gallery of this church is so constructed that a person placed at a certain point can hear a slight whisper uttered at a certain other point one hundred and fifteen feet distant. The facilities for education are good; there are two High schools, two free schools, endowed by former citizens of the place, and the usual number of Grammar and Primaries; also a Public Library, donated by Hon. Josiah Little, containing about 10,000 volumes.

The Eastern R. R. has here across the Merrimack one of the finest bridges in the State; it is about three-eighths of a mile long.

In 1865, the five cotton mills, running 58,692 spindles, consumed 1,949,517 pounds of cotton, valued at $212,508.28. From this was manufactured 7,659,852 yards of cotton cloth and 2,866 pounds of cotton yarn, the total value of which was $2,498,732.32. Capital employed, $960,000. Males employed, two hundred and sixty. Females, six hundred and forty-two. Other manufactures, excluding vessels, amount to $800,000.

Vessels launched during the year, thirteen; tonnage, 8,128; value, $493,380. Vessels engaged in fishing, seventy-seven; tonnage, 4,013; value of catch, all kinds, including shell-fish and cod-liver oil, sold, $174,549.95. The carrying-trade employed thirteen vessels; tonnage,

1,872; received for freight, $54,200.

SALISBURY & AMESBURY.

Salisbury was granted, 1638, under the name Merrimaek, to Simon Bradstreet and others. The next year it was incorporated as Colehester, but in 1640 took the present name by direction of the General Court. Its southerly boundary is the Merrimack River; on the west is the Powow River; on the north the New Hampshire line, and on the east the sea.

In 1643 the New Hampshire plantations, viz., Hampton, Exeter, Portsmouth and Dover were united to Massachusetts, and with Salisbury and Haverhill were formed into a county called Norfolk, of which Salisbury was the shire town, and so continued, until 1679, when New Hampshire was re-formed into a royal government. The boundary line was not finally settled until August, 1737. It seems as though the Merrimack River should have been the boundary between the two States, but geography was little understood in those days; indeed, many people supposed that New England was an island enclosed by the Hudson River and the "spacious river Canada."

The first church was formed with Rev. William Worcester, who came from Salisbury, in England, whence the name of the new town. There are two villages, the one at East Salisbury, being the first occupied, is sometimes ealled "Old Town." The other, at the westerly part of the town, is much the largest; it is situated upon the Powow River, at the head of tide-water. Here the extensive eorporation, known as Salisbury Mills, is located. The property consists of nine woollen mills, containing seventy-five sets of cards. They use 3,000,000 pounds of wool annually, and manufacture about 65,355 yards of 27-inch goods perweek. The power consists of five falls, making an aggregate of seventy-four feet fall. There is also one eotton mill with 2,500 spindles; also three saw mills and three grist mills. On the other side are the Amesbury Mills, having seven sets of eards. These two eorporations together employ about 1,600 hands. Amesbury and Salisbury are so closely connected in business and social interest that they are in these respects practically, and should be politically, one community. This subject has been agitated by the two places for some time, and, we understand, is to be brought to the test by a vote before long; it is proposed to eall the new town Merrimaek. Salisbury Beach is noted for its beauty, and is much frequented.

Amesbury is noted far and wide for its earriages; these are manufactured ehiefly at the West Village. In 1865, the value of these was about $260,000; the eensus of present year will probably show an increase of fully one hundred per eent, and the population and general prosperity of the place have increased also in a high ratio. The woollen manufacturers of the same year amounted to over $1,400,000. Other manufactures amounted to about $170,000. Population of Amesbury, 4,181, of Salisbury, 3,609. The combined population at the present time is probably over 10,000.

A branch from Newburyport gives the people rail communication with the rest of the world. This branch will doubtless the present summer be extended to Exeter, N. H., which will afford better communication north and east.

HUME & MORRILL, Chestnut street, Amesbury Mills, make a specialty of light earriages and sleighs.

CHARLES W. Evans keeps on hand a choice lot of family groceries, consisting of teas, eoffees, spices, flour, grain, etc., in the basement of Turner's block, Mill street, corner of Main, Amesbury Mills.

JOHN DENNETT, Mill street near Main, gives personal attention to House and Sign Painting, Graining, Glazing, etc., and deals in Doors, Blinds, Paints, etc.

SEABROOK

Was formerly a part of Hampton, and later of Hampton Falls. It is forty-two miles from Boston, by the Eastern Railroad. It was settled in 1638, by Christopher Hussy, Joseph Dow, and Thomas Philbrick. Like many of the newly settled towns of those times, Seabrook suffered severely from Indian hostilities. A Mrs. Hussy, a much esteemed member of the Society of Friends, was brutally murdered by the savages; also Thomas Lancester, Jonathan Gove, and Nicholas Bond. The victims were scalped and mangled in a horrible manner.

Most of the settlers of Seabrook came from the neighboring Massachusetts plantations. Its name seems to have been suggested by the numerous brooks and rivulets which are found within its borders. most prominent of these are, Black, Brown's and Walton's rivers.

some of these rivulets, bog-ore of iron is found.

The chief business is boat-building; there are seven firms engaged in this, and a large number of boats are annually set afloat from their There are three establishments for the manufacture of boots shops. and shoes.

Dearborn Academy was founded in 1851; a fund of $15,000 having been left for the purpose by Dr. Edward Dearborn. He also left $4,000 for the perpetual support of the gospel.

The surface of Seabrook is generally level, and the soil light, but of good capacity when well tilled. Titcomb's hill and Grape hill, the one lying partly in South Hampton, and the other partly in Massachusetts, afford, from their tops, good views of the surrounding country and of the Atlantic Ocean. The population is about 1,300; the valuation probably about $500,000.

HAMPTON FALLS,

Formerly a part of Hampton, is forty-three miles from Boston, thirteen from Portsmouth, and forty from Concord, N. H. The soil is moderately good. It was incorporated 1712. Theophilus Cotton, grandson of Rev. John Cotton of Boston, was ordained pastor the same year, and officiated until his death, in 1726. Among his successors was Rev. Samuel Langdon, D.D., for several years president of Harvard College.

He was settled here in 1781, and died Nov. 29, 1797.

"Hon. Meshech Weare, one of the most worthy and distinguished citizens of New Hampshire, was a resident of Hampton Falls. He served his country for nearly forty-five years; as speaker of the House in 1752, as commissioner to the Congress at Albany in 1754, as justice of Superior Court; and in 1777, as chief justice. During the Revolutionary period he held the highest offices, legislative, judicial, and executive; and, under the new constitution, was elected the first president, which office he resigned before the close of 1784. He was a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. He died, January 15, 1786, aged seventy-three. A monument has been erected in this town by order of the legislature to the memory of this distinguished man."

Population six hundred and forty; valuation about $400,000.

HAMPTON

Was first settled in 1638, though surveyed in 1633, and a building erected in 1636, called the Bound House, by order of the General Court of Massachusetts. The privilege of settling was granted, Oct. 7, 1638, to several persons belonging to Norfolk, England. Within a year there were sixty families within the corporate limits, which then included Hampton, North Hampton, Hampton Falls, Kensington, and Seabrook. The Indian name was Winnieummet. Several of the inhabitants fell victims to Indian ferocity; among them Capt. Samuel Sherburne, James Dolloff, Benjamin Fifield, and a boy named Huckley. An expedition, organized in this town by Capt. Swett, met with a disastrous repulse by the Indians at Tieonie Falls, on the Kennebec. Capt. Swett was among the killed.

The soil is well adapted to tillage and mowing; about one-fifth is salt marsh. From the various eminences in this town can be had romantic views of the ocean, Isles of Shoals, and the sea-coast from Portsmouth to Cape Ann. Its beaches are among the finest on the Atlantic coast, and are a favorite resort for invalids and parties of pleasure. Boar's head is an abrupt eminence, extending into the sea, and dividing the two beaches of Hampton. Ship-building was, previous to the revolution, and until there was a searcity of timber, followed to some extent, one or more vessels from one hundred and fifty to three hundred and fifty tons burthen being built annually.

Hampton Academy has an excellent reputation both at home and abroad, and the churches and schools maintain a high character. Population by last census, 1230; valuation, $528,075.

NORTH HAMPTON.

This town lies three miles beyond Hampton, and was formerly known as North Hill Parish. Its early history is identical with that of the parent town, from which it was separated Nov. 26, 1742. At first the settlers, from fear of the Indians, lived in garrisons; but, in spite of this precaution, four of their number were killed June 13, 1677, viz: Edward Colcord, Jr., Abraham Perkins, Jr., Benjamin Hilliard and Caleb Towle.

In those early times, we find examples of a purely democratic government. The people assembled together and made their own laws; some of these entered very minutely into domestic and social life. The drinking of healths and the use of tobacco was forbidden. Intercourse between the sexes, and advances towards matrimony, were regulated. Women were forbidden to expose their arms or bosoms to view. Their sleeves must reach to the wrist, and their dresses fit high upon the neck. Men must keep their hair cut short, and no one worth less than £200 was allowed to wear gold or silver lace, or silk hoods and scarfs.

North Hampton has a few small mills upon Little River; but the people are, for the most part, engaged in agriculture. The town borders on the ocean, and a portion of the famous Hampton Beach comes within its territorial limits. The population is about eight hundred; valuation, $331,893.

GREENLAND

Is a quiet farming town, especially celebrated for its excellent fruit. The orchards and gardens are the chief source of profit; the soil is fertile, and well cultivated. Altogether it is one of the most beautiful townships in New Eugland. It was separated from Portsmouth about the year 1703, and, at that time, had three hundred and twenty inhabitants. The first settlements were made on the bay side, and for some time the only communication was up the Piscataqua River and through Greenland Bay.

The geological formation is peculiar, and gives evidence of a recent upheaval of the land. On a high ridge of land, five miles from the sea, sea-shells and water-worn pebbles are found at the depth of forty or fifty feet. In another place, one-eighth of a mile from the Winnicut River, and near the head of tide-water, river mud, leaves, etc., have been found fifteen feet below the surface. River mud has also been found at a depth of forty feet on a ridge of clay and gravel.

There is a hill called Breakfast hill. Some Indians passed up the river in the night, landed, and made an attack on some houses on the plains, about half a mile distant from the town. They killed two or three of the inmates, and fired the houses. The inhabitants pursued and surprised them at breakfast on the top of this hill.

Two pastors filled the pulpit of the Congregational Church for almost a century. Rev. William Allen was ordained pastor in 1707, which office he held fifty-three years. Four years before the close of this pastorage, the Rev. Samuel McClintock was elected colleague to Mr. Allen, and was afterwards pastor until his death in 1804. Few such examples can be cited, especially in these days of transitory pastorates. The population of Greenland is about eight hundred; valuation about $400,000.

PORTSMOUTH.

Portsmouth is the only seaport of New Hampshire, and is one of the most ancient places in New England. It lies on the south side of the Piscataqua River, is forty-two miles from Coneord, N. H., and fifty-six from Boston. April 10, 1603, Captain Martin Pring set out under the patronage of some merehants of Bristol, England, with two ships, the "Speedwell" and the "Discoverer," for the purpose of making explorations. Pring explored the channel of the Piscataqua for three or four leagues, and it is supposed landed upon the present site of the city. His special object seems to have been to search for sassafras, considered of great value as a medicine.

In 1614, John Smith examined and extolled the waters of the river. In 1623, the eompany of Laeonia, in England, consisting of Gorges and Mason and other eminent and enterprising merchants of London, sent over a company of the better class of emigrants to establish a plantation on this river. They were high-minded men, of liberal and tolerant views in politics and religion. Their object was to establish trade and commerce, rather than to propagate theological tenets or governmental theories.

John Mason, the London merchant, secured the welfare of the place by advancing large sums of money, and may justly claim the credit of having laid the foundation of its subsequent prosperity. The first house was built at Odiorne's Point, a few rods north of the still visible remains of an ancient fort. It was built by David Tonson or Thompson, who seems to have been a prominent man among the planters. In honor of their patron, this first house was ealled Mason The Great House was built eight years afterwards, by Humphrey Chadbourne, on the bank of the river, near the corner of Court and Water streets. The bank of the river above where the Great House was built, and extending above what is now ealled Church Hill, produced a large quantity of strawberries; whence the place was at first called Strawberry bank. This name it bore until May 28, 1653, when, upon petition of Brian Pendleton and others, the name Portsmouth was allowed by the General Court, at Boston, "as being a name most suitable for this place, it being the river's mouth and good as any in the land." It was also the name of John Mason's native city. this time there were between fifty and sixty families in the place, and so industrious and successful were the planters, that they were able to afford a generous assistance to the early sufferers at Plymouth. line of the township was ordered to reach from the sea by Hampton line to Wynnaeot River." The original limits of the town included Portsmouth, Neweastle, Rye, and a part of Newington and Greenland.

In 1641, Portsmouth, with Kittery, Dover and Exeter, was an independent republic; but soon after Portsmouth and Dover placed themselves under the jurisdiction of Massachusetts, which connection continued until 1679, when New Hampshire was formed into a separate province, to be governed by a President and a Council appointed by the king.

Portsmouth fortunately almost wholly escaped the ravages of the Indians, which proved so great a seourge and terror to most of the settlements. This was owing in large measure to its favorable location, being protected on three sides by the Piscataqua, the oeean, and an inlet, so that the only aeeess by land was along a narrow isthmus on the northwest, connecting the town with the main land. A stockade was thrown aeross the isthmus, and thus the inhabitants were protected; the fact that the settlement was very considerable in number and quite compact, was also in their favor.

The Royal Governors and the King's Council for many years made Portsmouth their place of residence. This gave the town much political importance, and the wealth of its inhabitants, their activity and enterprise, their public spirit, and the general refinement that pervaded society, caused Portsmouth early to take and maintain an advanced standing as one of the chief towns of New England. It is situated upon a beautiful peninsula, formed by the north and south mill pends, about three miles from the sea. The surface rises into gentle eminences; the most elevated of these, on the South road, is often called "The Seven Pines," from the fact that seven lofty pines formerly grew upon its top, and served as a landmark for seamen.

In the older and more thickly settled portion of the city, the streets are irregular and narrow. Before the commencement of the present century, there were but four brick dwelling-houses in the place; the rest were of wood, and huddled together in such a manner as to render them poeuliarly liable to destructive fires. Dec. 26, 1802, one hundred and two buildings were burnt. Four years later fourteen buildings, including St. John's Church, were destroyed. But the most ealamitous fire broke out Dec. 22, 1813, sweeping over about fifteen aeres of ground; it burned three hundred and ninety-seven buildings, more than one hundred of which were dwellings. These severe lessons induced the legislature to pass an act, authorizing the selectmen to widen the streets, and forbidding the erection of wooden buildings of more than twelve feet in height. The business buildings, at the present time, are principally of briek. Of late, numerous spacious and elegant stores, and tasty and ornamental private residences, have been erected in various parts of the city. The harbor is commodious, safely enclosed on every side, and affords good anehorage; the channel, at low water, is forty feet deep, and is well secured from storms by islands and headlands. The river current, opposite the city, is very swift, being more than five miles per hour, and the tide rises ten feet.

The United States Navy Yard is on Continental Island, on the east side of the river. Here the largest vessels can be built or repaired with the utmost despatch. Among the conveniences for this purpose, are the floating balance dry dock, a very ingenious piece of mechanism, and three immense ship-houses; the largest of these latter is two hundred and forty feet long, one hundred and thirty-one feet wide, and has one hundred and thirty tons of slate in its roof covering. The keel of the frigate Congress was laid in the building in 1837. The doek, with its appendages, eost $800,000.

As a ship-building place, Portsmouth is entitled to the highest praise. Between the years 1800 and 1850, four hundred and eighty-six vessels were built in this harbor; two hundred and eighteen of them were ships. These are preeminent for their beauty, speed and size. Their combined tonnage was 126,000.

A large number of national vessels have been built here, some of which have made themselves a world-wide fame. At this port was launched the first ship of war ever built on this side the Atlantic, the "North America." Here, also, was built the "Kearsarge," which sunk the pirate "Alabama." The U. S. government has recently purchased Scavey's Island, for the purpose of affording increased facilities for governmental works. The principal islands not already mentioned are Badger's Island and Great Island; and there are about a dozen smaller ones, adding much to the beauty and picturesqueness of the view as seen from prominent points. The principal entrance to the harbor, which is between the main land and the east side of Great Island, is defended by Fort McClary on the former, and Fort Constitution on the northwest point of the latter. There are four lighthouses: viz., Fort Point, Whale's Back, White Island, and Boone Island.

The city charter was granted July 6, 1849. The city is connected by bridges, with Kittery, Me., and Newcastle on Great Island. The bridge to Kittery is composed of two sections; the first extending to Noble's Island four hundred and eighty feet, the other, 1,750 feet: the latter, is supported by seventy piers. For nine hundred feet, the water is forty-five to fifty-three feet deep. Its railroads are the Eastern, the Concord, the Portland, Saco and Portsmouth, and the Portsmouth, Great Falls and Conway.

The New Hampshire Gazette is said to be the oldest newspaper in America, having been first issued in 1756. The other papers are, the Portsmouth Journal (weekly), The States and Union (weekly), Daily Chronicle, and Daily Times.

The churches are: St. John's Church (Episcopal), Chapel street; South Parish (Unitarian), State street; Middle street Baptist Church; Universalist Society, Pleasant street; North Parish (Triuitarian), Market square; Methodist Episcopal Society, State street; Christian Society, Court street; Free Will Baptist Society, corner of Hauover and Pearl streets; Second Advent Society, Hanover street; and St. Mary's Church (Catholic), corner of Chatham and Summer streets.

There are two High Schools (one for boys and one for girls), seven Grammar, four Intermediate, seven Primary, and one Infant School. The more general means of education are good,—the Athenæum Library contains over 8,000 volumes, the Mercantile Library Association has 1,500 volumes, and the Young Men's Christian Association five hundred volumes; and there are several other libraries belonging to the various religious societies. A Public Library is now being established, through the generosity of some of the public spirited citizens who have liberally donated funds for the purpose. There are four National Banks and three Savings Banks,—one of the latter organized within the past year. The Custom House, in which also is the Post-Office, is a splendid specimen of architecture, built of granite; it is an ornament to the city, and a credit to the government.

The population of Portsmouth is probably somewhat less than 12,000. There is a good deal of wealth here, but much of it is invested in such a way as not to show in active business at home, being in railroad and manufacturing stocks of other places.

From Portsmouth there is easy access to the famous Rye Beach. Private teams go down by dozens and scores every day through the warm weather. The drive is a very pleasant one, with shade trees on either side.

The Isles of Shoals, nine miles out from Portsmouth Lights, seem properly to belong to Portsmouth, because they are more easily approached from this point than any other. There are eight of them:

the largest, Hog Island, contains three hundred and fifty acres; Star Island, has one hundred and fifty acres; Haley's, one hundred; the other five are quite small, the largest of them having but, about eight acres, and the smallest, one.

On Star Island is a remarkable chasm, which seems to have been caused by an earthquake. By secreting herself in this, Betty Moody escaped the Indians when most of her companions were carried off by them. It bears her name to this day. Most of the other islands have similar, but less remarkable chasms.

For more than a century previous to the Revolution, there were from three to six hundred inhabitants on these islands. A large fishing business was, and still is, done there. The reputation of these fisheries was achieved by the eelebrated dun-fish, which, it is now conceded, only differ from the common cod in the circumstance of being eaught and cured in the winter.

There is but little soil suitable for cultivation; but the Shoals are a pleasant resort for water-parties, and their delightful, bracing air is regarded as very beneficial to ecrtain classes of invalids.

Boats run to and from, and the excellent hotels are liberally patronized by summer visitors.

Messrs. G. B. & S. W. Came have established themselves in the carriage business in Portsmouth at No. 15 Hanover street. They have a large building, and every facility for manufacturing or repairing carriages and sleighs of every grade. We hope their efforts will be appreciated, and a large and prosperous carriage business be built up.

It may not generally be known that our townsmen, Messrs. T. E. O. & Wm. Marvin, after a series of investigations and experiments which have continued for several years, have commenced the manufacture of a very excellent article of eod-liver oil, which, in a marked degree, answers all the conditions required, and, by the peculiar process of preparation, retains all the active and essential principles which are so efficacious in the alleviation of suffering, and the restoration of health. Messrs. Marvin procure fresh livers, and the oil is extracted on the same day the fish are eaught, so that there can be no question of its freshness and purity. The demand is already large, and promises soon to be equal to the full capacity of their manufactory, which is now two hundred gallous daily.

Samuel Cleaves & Son, No. 3 Elm Street, opposite E. R. R. depot, are an old and well-known firm. Their soap is a standard article, equal to the best. We trust all our readers remember that "cleanliness is next to godliness."

Those in want of agricultural implements, seeds, or fertilizers, will find each and all of these in great variety at Messrs. Mason & Seaver's, Nos. 77 and 79 Market street. They also buy and sell on eommission, hay, straw and produce of all kinds.

Jackson's Express may be relied upon at all times for prompt and faithful delivery of, all bundles, goods, and packages of value. Their office is at No. 24 Congress street.

WM. H. Foster's book and job printing establishment, No. 16 Pleasant street, opposite the post-office, is an old-established place, and every description of printing is done neatly, and at reasonable prices. Parties in the country can send orders by express, and have them promptly filled.

KITTERY.

This is the oldest town in Maine, dating back to 1647. Its excellent harbor, and rare facilities for fishing, early made it a place of considerable consequence. Its territory formerly included Elliot, Berwick, South Berwick and North Berwick, and was known as the Plantation of Piscataqua. It was a portion of Sir Fernando Gorges' estate, and was settied in 1623; its records as a town begin March 19, 1648. 1653, the whole province came under the jurisdiction of Massachusetts, and so remained until 1820, when the new State of Mainc was formed.

The early settlers seem to have been actuated by motives of gain rather than, like those of Massachusetts and Connecticut, by religious and political principles. Accordingly, there was lack of concert, and, of course, of energy in their efforts. Hence, we find, after the lapse of a century and a half, when the other settlements had become comparatively great and powerful, the settlements of Maine were still almost wholly confined to the coast. They were subjected to many and severe visitations by the Indians; and conflicting claims and jealousies, with a general lack of harmony among themselves, make their early history one of peculiar hardship and misfortune.

At Kittery Point lived and died one of their most eminent men, Wm. Pepperell, Esq. This great land-holder and eminent merchant began life in a very small way as a fisherman, but by perseverance and energy, combined with rare good fortune, accumulated a very large estate. He died in 1733, and an elegant and costly monument marks his last resting-place. The ruins of his mansion are still visible near Pepperell's Cove. Here also lived his son, Sir William Pepperell, Baronet, Lieut. General of His Majesty's forces, etc. He added largely to the wealth left him by his father, and acquired fame and title by leading the expedition which captured the famous fortress of Louisburg in 1745.

A bridge connects Kittery with Continental Island, on which is the United States Navy Yard; and another bridge across the Piscataqua gives access to Portsmouth.

There are two villages, Kittery Point and Fore Side. The land is rocky, but the soil is good, and under careful cultivation very productive. Population about 3,000.

ELLIOT.

ELLIOT is small in territory but very thickly settled. Until March 1, 1810, it was a part of Kittery; the first settlement seems to have been made about 1632. It is almost exclusively a farming community. Along the banks of the Piscataqua River are handsome cottages, to which are attached gardens, filled in summer with blooming flowers.

The farms are well cultivated, and the orchards richly laden with fruit make a beautiful scene for the eye and a tempting appetizer for the palate.

"Agamenticus," a noted landmark for mariners, is visible from this town. Its summit was a station for the Coast Survey under the direction of Prof. Bache. It is six hundred feet above the sea, and from its top can be seen a splendid panorama of coast, indented with bays, and studded with islands.

There are several saw and grist mills in Elliot; two of them are tidemills. Other manufacturing interests are small. The valuation of Elliot in 1860, was $348,599. Population, 1,768. Number of polls, three hundred and seventy-nine.

SOUTH BERWICK.

This town adjoins Quampheagen Falls, extending as far as Salmon Falls. Originally it belonged to Kittery, and was settled simultaneously with Strawberry bank. On account of the general harmony and exemplary good conduct of the inhabitants, it was for a long time known as "the Parish of Unity."

Berwick was separated from Kittery in 1700, and South Berwick, taken from Berwick, was incorporated 1814.

Among the early settlers, were Humphrey Chadbourne, Shapleigh, Heard, Frost, and Emery, all ambitious and enterprising; the first named purchased a tract of land of the Indians, on which to commence the settlement. Berwick Academy stands upon a portion of this purchase.

The Indians made a number of attacks upon the settlement. In 1675, two noted warriors, Andrew of Saco, and Hopewood of Kennebunk, with others, attacked the house of John Tozier; the owner was absent, and his helpless family was without a male protector. A young girl, only eighteen years old, shut the door and kept it closed, until the children had escaped into the woods in the rear. The girl was left for dead by the savages, but revived, and lived many years. Three other attacks were made that fall, and ten persons killed or severely wounded. The early settlers had no taste for agriculture, but were attracted hither by the dense forests of oak, pine, and hemlock; but when lumber grew scarce, and the people turned their attention to farming, they found the soil strong and productive.

The manufacturing interests are considerable, and it is the centre of quite a large inland trade. Three railroads pass through this town. The Portland, Saco and Portsmouth, and the Boston and Maine meet at South Berwick Junction; and a cross road from Brock's crossing on the Eastern road, ten miles from Portsmouth, extends to Salmon Falls and Great Falls, and thence to Alton, Rochester and Wakefield.

One of the churches here has been in existence nearly one and three quarters centuries.

Among the prominent men of the present century may be mentioned, Col. Jonathan Hamilton, Hon. John Lord, John Cushing, Esq., Gen. Ichabod Goodwin and Hon. William A. Hayes.

The population is 2,592. Valuation, $619,409.

WELLS.

The first permanent settlement was made in 1643. The aboriginals called the place Webhannet, from the river which runs through the marsh and forms a harbor.

The Rev. John Wheelwright, brother to the celebrated Ann Hutchinson, who was banished from Boston for Antinomianism, was among the first inhabitants. He was a classmate of Oliver Cromwell.

This territory was a part of the grant to Gorges, who conveyed some four or five hundred acres to Mr. Wheelwright, on the 17th of April, 1643.

Wells was visited by the Indians under command of Mogg, Oct. 18, 1676; two persons were killed, one wounded, and thirteen cattle destroyed. The garrison was summoned to surrender, but refusing, was left unattacked for that time. June 10 and 11, 1692, a determined assault was made upon the place, by a large force of French and Indians. Fort Storer had only fifteen men under command of Captain Converse. Fortunately fourteen men with ammunition and provisions arrived in two sloops. One of the passengers, John Diamond, was captured by Indian spies; from him they learned the strength of the garrison, and were so certain of victory, that they even agreed among themselves as to the division of the spoils. An immediate attack was made both upon the fort and upon the sloops; the latter were several times set on fire by fire-arrows, but the flames were extinguished; and the assailants repulsed. Many other attempts to destroy the sloops were made, but without avail. The next morning six men arrived in the vicinity of the fort, and by stratagem succeeded in eluding the enemy, and gaining a safe entrance. The French and Indians now concentrated their whole force and moved steadily towards the fort. One faint-hearted soldier sighed a surrender, but was sternly rebuked by Capt. Converse. "Utter that word again, and you are a dead man! -All lie close, - fire not a gun till it will do execution!" enemy gave a shout, opened into three ranks, and fired all at once. The cannon, some of them twelve pounders, and the small arms from the fort returned such a blaze of fire, that the repulse was complete, and the siege practically ended. Not a man in the fort was killed, and only one of the mariners. Several of the enemy fell, and among them Labrocree. To avenge his death, the Indians put poor John Diamond to the torture. "They stripped, scalped, and maimed him; slit his hands and feet, between the fingers and toes, cut deep gashes in the fleshy part of his body, and then stuck the wounds full of lighted torches, leaving him to die by piece-meal in the agonies of consum ing fire."

In August, 1703, Wells was again attacked, and with such ferocity, that, in a short time, it lost thirty-nine in killed and prisoners, and many others wounded.

Much of the soil in Wells is poor; the principal article of export is wood and ship-timber; formerly some ships were built. There are nine small streams running through the town. These afford water power for a number of saw mills, grist mills, and shingle mills. There are three Post-offices, viz: Wells, Wells Depot, and Ogunquit. The population is about 3,000. Valuation, $560,000.

KENNEBUNK.

This town was granted to Lieut. John Sanders by the original grantee, Sir Fernando Gorges, in 1643. The first house is supposed to have been built by Goodman Sanders, son of John. Previous to 1653, when the town was incorporated, Mr. — or as the phrase in those times was Goodman, — Burke had a house on the sea-shore, near the mouth of the Kennebunk River. This house, and Sanders' and one occupied by Stover Batsom, seem to have been for the accommodation of travellers passing from Piscataqua and York to the settlements eastward.

The growth of the place was very slow for many years. The falls and water privilege on the Mousam River were occupied by Jonathan Corwin and Eleazer Hawthorne, from Scotland, in 1679. They erected a saw mill, grist mill and blacksmith shop, and a dwelling house, and soon opened a fine trade with Boston, by shipping lumber to that city. In 1688, the Indians burned the mills, and the owners moved west.

The people of Kennebunk endured their full share of suffering and danger from the various Indian wars, and performed their whole duty in defending themselves and neighbors. One Sergeaut Larrabee is mentioned as particularly active and vigilant. By 1760, just after the close of the French war, the settlement had made considerable progress, though real estate was hardly held in the estimation it is at present, since we find that at this time a two-story tenement was rented for one dollar a year, and the tenant had also the right to take what wood he needed for his own use from the adjoining land: on the western side of the river, land was sold at the rate of one acre for a vard of calico.

Kennebunk owes her population and wealth largely to ship-building. The first ship was built by John Bourne, of Wells, in 1755, and thenceforward the business made rapid progress. Fishing also received considerable attention: salmon, bass and shad, were abundant in Mousam River; even at the present day some shad are found there.

The principal places of business are, the Village, the Lauding and the Port. There is some ship-building, and a little manufacturing.

The population is about 2,700. Valuation, $1,559,902.

KENNEBUNKPORT.

This town was formerly known as Cape Porpoise. It seems to have been settled in the summer of 1619. The Plymouth Company granted a patent, Feb. 12, 1629, to John Oldham and Richard Vines, of a tract of land, four miles in breadth, on the sea-shore, and extending back into the country eight miles, having the Saco River for its eastern boundary. There was much conflict of title in these lands, of which Cape Porpoise was a part; no less than six grants having been made to different parties by various crowned heads of Europe.

Cape Porpoise was brought under the control of Massachusetts, and incorporated 1653; yet so little important was it in wealth or numbers, that it was considered little better than an adjunct of Saco. During the war between England and France, 1702-1713, Cape Porpoise, being inhabited only by a few unsettled fishermen, was wholly desolated. It is probable that most of them made their escape in anticipation of an attack

In 1717, a petition for re-incorporation was granted by the General Assembly of Massachusetts, and the name changed to Arundel. Feb.

19, 1821, the name was changed to Kennebunkport.

The soil is clayey, and there is but little waste land. The grass crop is very abundant both on the upland and on the salt marsh. In the southeast part, there are valuable quarries of building-stone. The harbor at the extremity of Cape Porpoise is the only safe one between Portsmouth and Portland. The chief business is farming, fishing, shipbuilding and quarrying. The people are well accommodated with schools, churches, etc. Population probably about 4,000. Valuation about $1,000,000.

BIDDEFORD

Was settled June 25, 1630. Vines, one of the original proprietors, made great efforts, and spent large sums of money in attempting to establish a settlement, but with only indifferent success. Indeed, instead of proving a source of profit, it resulted in pecuniary embarrassment, so that he sold his patent in 1645 to Dr. Robert Child, of Nashaway, now Lancaster, Mass. Dr. Child seems to have held the title a number of years, without much effort to improve the property, and finally sold to William Phillips of Boston. Phillips paid the doctor £90 for the town of Biddeford, and took his deed, bearing date March 11, 1658–9. In order to make himself entirely secure, Phillips soon after obtained another title from the Indian Sachem Mogg Megone. From Phillips, therefore, all the land titles in Biddeford are derived.

During the Indian wars, a garrison was erected at Winter Harbor, and maintained at public cost. The settlement suffered severely, and was twice nearly destroyed.

Biddeford was united to Saco in 1660, but was separated and incorporated as a distinct town in 1718. It was incorporated as a city 1855. Twenty-five years ago, what is now the business part of the city was almost an open field. At this time the Laconia Company commenced operations, and five years later the Pepperell Company started. Each of these has a capital of $1,000,000, and their combined payrolls, when running their full capacity, average about $40,000 per month. They together run 120,000 spindles, and manufacture about 32,000,000 yards of cotton goods annually. The number of employees is about twenty-five hundred. A large establishment for the manufacture of cotton machinery, and numerous smaller manufactories of various kinds, contribute to the general business aspect of the place. There are a number of vessels owned in Biddeford, which do a profitable carrying-trade between this and other Atlantic ports.

There are two National Banks and two Savings Banks located here. Two Weekly Newspapers are also published in Biddeford, and well sustained.

Among the principal manufactories may be mentioned the Saco WATER POWER MACHINE SHOP, Smith street; has a capital of $300,000, and employ five hundred men; they manufacture Cotton and Woollen Machinery,

THE HARDY MACHINE Co. has a capital of $75,000. They manufacture Card Grinders, Cotton Machinery, etc.

The city is situated upon a slope on the easterly bank of the Saco River. From the Heights in the rear, there is a fine view of the river and the city, with its busy streets and tasteful private residences. Near by is Agamenticus, and away in the distance the White Hills of New Hampshire.

Liberal provision has been made for schools, libraries, and other means of intellectual advancement. The churches are numerous, and well sustained by the different denominations.

S. K. & B. F. Hamilton, No. 106 Main street, Union Block, attend promptly and faithfully to all law business that may be entrusted to them.

J. C. Libby, furnishing undertaker, No. 13 Bacon street, has constantly on hand coffins, robes, plates and caskets, and is also agent for Fisk's Patent Metallic Burial Cases.

SACO.

This city lies on the eastern bank of the Saco River. Its territory was granted by the Plymouth Company, to Thomas Lewis and Capt. Richard Bonython; their patent bears date Feb. 12, 1629 (old style); the description is "that tract of land, lying on the north side of the Swanckadocke [Saco] River, containing in breadth, from northeast to southwest, along by the sea, four miles in a straight line, and extending eight miles up into the mainland."

The patentees sailed for the New World next year, and took legal possession of their grant, June 28, 1631. There is some uncertainty as to the number of colonists, and the precise date of settlement, as there are no town records until 1653, when the province came under the jurisdiction of Massachusetts. At this time it was ordered "that Saco shall be a town-ship by itself, and always shall be a part of Yorkshire, and shall enjoy the privileges of a town, as others have, and do Nevertheless, Saco was represented in the General Court but twice during that century, viz: in 1659 and 1675. At this latter date the troubles with the Indians were so severe, that the settlement seems to have been almost entirely abandoned. Indeed we find, little more said about the place until 1718, when, upon petition of the inhabitants, that part of Saco on the west side of Saco River was set off, and incorporated by the name of Biddeford, so named from the town in England, whence some of the settlers had come. From this it seems that the two parts had been united at some previous time, as they were originally separate grants. The eastern side of the river was so thinly settled, that it was regarded as having no corporate authority. Thus it remained, until 1762, when the inhabitants having become of sufficient number, the general court was petitioned for an act of incorporation, which was granted in June, and the name changed to Pepperellborough, in honor of Gen. Pepperell. In 1805, the old, and for many reasons preferable name, Saco, was restored. The city charter was adopted Fcb. 18, 1867.

The two cities, Saco and Biddeford, are greatly indebted for their prosperity to the Saco River, which flows between them. This beautiful stream, one of the largest in New England, rises near the notch in the White Mountains, flowing in a somewhat fantastic course, in a general south-southeast direction, a distance of one hundred and sixty miles, and empties into the sea at Saco. It is so broken by falls, as not to be navigable. Saco Falls, only four miles from the sea, are forty-two feet in height. The other principal falls are Salmon Falls at Hollis and Buxton, thirty feet, Steep Falls at Limington, twenty feet, and Great Falls at Hiram, where the water descends seventy-two feet.

The Ammonoosuck, a branch of the Connecticut, rises within about two rods of the Saco, and flows off in the opposite direction.

On account of the mountainous character of the country through which the Saco flows, the water sometimes rises to dangerous heights. In an ordinary spring, it rises ten to fifteen fect. During a long storm in October, 1785, the water rose to an immense height, sweeping off bridges and mills, and inundating the houses along the banks. In 1814, a similar freshet caused much damage. The appearance of Saco Falls at such times is truly magnificent.

At first the chief business was getting out lumber for the Boston market, and a number of saw mills were erected for this purpose.

For many years Saeo and Biddeford held the lead in this business In 1800, there were seventeen saw mills, turning out about 50,000 feet of lumber, daily. In 1827, 21,000,000 feet of lumber were sawed. This business has now given way to more permanent manufacturing interests. As early as 1811, iron works were established, but soon gave place to cotton mills. The York Manufacturing Company is a large corporation, manufacturing colored cottons. They have a capital of $1,200,000. The monthly pay-roll, when on full time, is about $20,000.

The Public Library, the Athenaeum, and the Aeademy, in addition to the excellent Public Schools, and the Churches, furnish facilities to the rising generation for intellectual culture and improvement in manners and morals.

The population is about 7,000, the valuation $3,500,000.

Charles M. Littlefield, on Pepperell Square, manufactures wheels and eigar boxes, and does all kinds of earriage sawing and dressing, also job planing.

SCARBOROUGH.

This place joins Portland on the southwest, and contains about forty-eight square miles. Its Indian name was Owascoag, meaning much grass. The first settler, named Stratton, took possession of two islands, which were long known as Stratton's Islands. The first legal proprietor was Capt. Thomas Cammock, nephew of the earl of Warwick. He received a grant of 1,500 acres, lying between Black Point and Spurwink rivers, from the Plymouth Company in 1681. A small settlement was begun here by men who, from lack of means, became the tenants of Cammock.

Another settlement was started by two brothers, Andrew and Arthur Alger, at a piace called Dunstan. Their title was acquired from the Indians residing at this place, and this was subsequently adjudged a good and sufficient claim. The settlement at Black Point increased rapidly, and soon became one of the most flourishing and important places on the coast. Its facilities for farming and fishing attracted an enterprising and hardy people.

In 1791, its population was 2,235, while Portland had but 2,240. Henry Josselyn, who acted as Mason's agent at Piscataqua, settled at Black Point in 1635. He became largely interested in lands in this vicinity, and was somewhat noted as a politician. In 1659 or 1660, John Libby settled here. He was probably the first of the name in New England, and is the ancestor of the large number of Libbys in this vicinity. He became one of the most prominent men in the settlement; died 1682.

During the several Indian wars, the inhabitants of Scarborough and vicinity were so harassed that the settlements were abandoned, and the inhabitants compelled to seck homes less exposed to savage incursions.

The second settlement is supposed to have been commenced about 1702 or 1703. Seven persons came in a sloop from Lynn, and were the only inhabitants for at least a year.

A large and strong fortification had been erected at Black Point in 1681, and this the new settlers used as a defence. In August, 1703, five hundred French and Indians, under command of Beaubarin, made a sudden attack all along the coast from Casco to Wells.

They surrounded the fortification at this place, garrisoned only by the little band from Lynn, and demanded its surrender. The besieged refused to entertain any proposal from the enemy, and they at once commenced the work of undermining the fort, but before they had half completed the work, a heavy rain storm came on which lasted two days. The soil gave way, nearly filling the excavation already made, and exposing the assailants to the fire of the garrison, which harassed and disheartened them so much that the siege was abandoned, leaving the brave little band unharmed. After this there were no pitched battles, but through all the rest of the Indian troubles, a sort of desultory guerilla warfare was maintained. Two men, Charles Pine and Richard Hunniwell, were particularly noted for their bitter animosity against the Indians, and their numerons daring and dangerous adventures among them.

The lumbering business engaged the almost exclusive attention of the people for many years; but when the forests were exhausted, they began to avail themselves of its agricultural resources. The broad salt marshes were, previous to this, the main dependence for grass.

The men of Scarborough have a worthy record in the Revolution, and in all the wars in which our country has been engaged. Communication with the rest of the world is had by the P. S. & P. R. R., which has two stations; viz. West Scarborough and Oak Hill. Its churches and schools are in a flourishing condition. Population about 1,850. Valuation, $600,000.

CAPE ELIZABETH.

This town is a peninsula, separated from Portland by Fore River; a long bridge connects the two places. The area of the peninsula is a little over twenty square miles. This, together with Portland, was formerly a part of the old town of Falmouth. Richmond Island, about one mile south from the main land, contains two hundred acres, and was first occupied by Walter Bagnall in 1628. He had no title, and seems to have had no object, except to drive a profitable trade with the Indians. He was successful in this, and remained undisturbed until, by some act of cupidity, he excited the ire of the savages, who killed him, Oct. 3, 1631.

The island was granted to Robert Trelawny and Moses Goodyear, Dec. 1, 1631, by the Plymouth Company. A church seems to have been established here about 1637, under the charge of Richard Gibson, an Episcopal clergyman. This island, from favorable location, grew rapidly, and became the seat of considerable foreign commerce. In 1638, a three hundred ton ship arrived here, laden with wine; and the next year, John Winter, Trelawny's agent, sent to England six thousand pipe-staves. Sixty men were engaged in the fisheries at this time. Like some other places, its early promise was not justified by subsequent progress, and after the first Indian war, it ceased to be a place of any commercial importance, and, at the present time, a single farm-house occupies the place formerly teeming with life and business.

Cape Elizabeth was incorporated 1764. There is nothing of special interest in its early town history, more than was common to all settlements in those times.

The State Reform School is located here. It will accommodate two hundred and forty boys. These are employed in farming and in various mechanical pursuits. They have religious instruction, and a good library, and many of them give evidence of reformation.

The works of several manufacturing corporations, are located here; viz. the Portland Rolling Mills, Atwood Lead Company, and Portland

Kerosene Company.

The population in 1860 was 3,281. Valuation, $757,632.

PORTLAND.

THE materials for a history of Portland are so rich and abundant, that he who simply seeks to write a sketch, is likely to suffer from an embarrasse du riches. The first settlement was made by George Cleeves and Richard Tucker, who located near the month of Spurwink River, in 1630. This tract, however, was claimed by John Winter, as agent for Trelawney. Winter succeeded in getting a decree from the Provincial court, sustaining his claim, and the ejected parties took refuge, 1632, on the neck, now Portland.

The Indian name was Machigonne. Cleeves claimed and held this neck against the efforts of Winter to dispossess him by virtue of a proclamation by King James of England, by which the king "gave unto every subject of his who should transport himself over into this country upon his own expense, for himself and for every person that he should so transport, one hundred and fifty acres of land."

After holding this in possession a number of years, to 1640, he enlarged his limits by purchase from Sir Fernando Gorges, the proprietor of the Province of Mainc. His possessions were first known as Cleeves's Neck, then as Mnnjoy Neck, also sometimes called Casco and Old Casco. In July, 1658, the settlement received the name of Falmouth, from Massachusetts authorities, and its limits are thus defined: "Those places called Spurwink and Casco from the east side of Spurwink river to the Clapboard islands in Casco bay and running back eight miles into the country."

When the first Indian war commenced, 1675, there were only five or six families on the Neck. One of these was George Burroughs, the minister, whose history had such a sad and tragical ending in 1692, when he fell a victim to that strange delusion, the Salem witchcraft. other parts of the settlement had increased more rapidly, and everything was in a very prosperous condition, but during the first year of the war the settlement was utterly laid waste; one account says "not a habitation was left nor any marks of improvement." Thirty-four persons were killed in the whole town, and among them Thomas Brackett, John Munjoy and Isaac Wakely on the Neck.

No one seems to have ventured into the desolated locality while the war continued, but after the conclusion of peace George Bramhall purchased the hill which is still known by his name, and commenced the tanning business. Some of the old residents came back and re-possessed their property or obtained new grants, and in 1680 Fort Loyal was built at the foot of what is now India street. In this fort, Governor Danforth held a court for the purpose of organizing the new settlement on a safe basis. The houses were arranged in a compact manner, so as to be more easily defended. The inhabitants brought in at this time were a superior class. Among them was Pierre Baudonin, or as it was anglicized, Peter Bowdoin. He subsequently established himself in medical practice in Boston, and is the ancestor of the distinguished family there of that name.

For about ten years they prospered, and Falmonth numbered seven hundred inhabitants; twenty-five families resided on the Neck, and the difficulties which always surround a new settlement were fast disappearing before their sturdy efforts, when the tocsin of war warned them of new trials and fresh dangers.

In the autumn of 1689, a body of French and Indians, seven hundred strong, landed on Peak's Island; but providentially Major Benjamin Church, of Plymouth Colony, an inveterate enemy of the Indians, who was on an expedition eastward, arrived at this place in season to defeat their designs. Measures were at once taken for defence; the troops were landed as secretly as possible, and marched an hour before daylight into a brushy cover, about half a mile from The enemy during the night had changed their position to the upper part of the neck, and at daybreak, September 21, approached the farm of Anthony Brackett. The alarm being given, Captain Hall's company hastened to meet them, and the principal action took place in Brackett's orchard. Major Church hurried forward with a reinforcement and a supply of ammunition. After some severe fighting, Major Church advanced up the creek for the purpose of attacking the enemy in the rear, who, finding the place thus made too hot for them, beat a precipitate retreat into the forest. Eleven were killed on the English side and ten wounded, three of whom, Mr. Freeze, Mr. Bramhall, and a friendly Indian, died of their wounds. Thus ended an action of six hours duration, which but for the presence of Major Church and his company would have resulted most disastrously. A garrison of fifteen men, with a commander and a gunner, was left in the fort by Church, and sixty soldiers in the town, and a quiet but anxious winter followed. Confident that the enemy would renew the attack upon the first favorable opportunity, many of the inhabitants sought refuge in places of greater security.

Early in the ensuing spring, 1690, Captain Willard, who was in command at this point, was ordered with all the regular troops, to the scene of operations elsewhere. The defence of the place now remained solely with the inhabitants, a state of things which the enemy was not long in discovering. Early in May, the force which had destroyed Schenectady, New York, three months before, joined the Indians in the East, and soon appeared in the neighborhood of Casco Bay; their first exploit was the capture of Robert Greason.

Aware of their presence, Captain Sylvanus Davis, who was in command of Fort Loyal, ordered that the people should remain in garrison and keep constant watch to prevent surprise. But Lieutenant Clark with thirty men, in their zeal to obtain information of the enemy's movements, imprudently neglected this advice, and precipitated the catastrophe.

Going out to the summit of a hill — probably Munjoy's — to reconnoitre, they suddenly discovered the enemy in covert there, behind a fence. Thinking to get rid of the difficulty by boldly facing it, they advanced quickly towards the fence with a loud shout, but the enemy opened upon them such a deadly fire, that the Lieutenant and nearly half his men were killed on the spot, and the rest ran for the blockhouse - probably Lawrence's. This they defended with great bravery until morning, when it was abandoned, and the inmates sought refuge in Fort Loyal. The enemy burned the block-house, and then, May 16th, turned their immediate attention to the fort, which they besieged with their whole force consisting of some four or five hundred French and Indians, under command of Monsieur Burniffe. After a gallant defence, continued five days and four nights, "in which most of the English were killed and all the houses burned," the little garrison, worn out with watching and fatigue, yielded to a barbarous foe, who shamefully disregarded both the claims of humanity and the articles of capitulation. Captain Davis says, the commander "suffered our women and children, and our men, to be made captives in the hands of the heathen, to be cruelly murdered and destroyed, many of them, and especially our wounded men; only the French kept myself and three or four more, and carried us overland to Canada."

Thus ended in disaster and death the second attempt to colonize.

"Old Caseo."

In August, 1703, the two settlements of Falmouth called Spurwink and Purpoodock were entirely destroyed. The inhabitants were butchered in the most dreadful manner, and with atrocities too horrible to describe. A few settlers returned to Falmouth in 1708, but the settlement on the Neek was not resumed until after the peace of Utrecht in 1713. Some of the old settlers came back, and many new ones located on the lands without a shadow of a title, which led to bitter disputes and troublesome litigation; but the conflicting claims were finally settled by the Supreme Court in May, 1731.

In 1749, the population had increased to 2,346, of whom seven hundred and twenty were on the Neek. Most of the dwelling-houses, one hundred and twenty in number were below Centre street — all were of wood, generally but one story high and unpainted. Above Centre street was an "eminent wilderness," covered with wood and swamp. The business centre was at the landing by the foot of India street. The people were generally engaged in lumbering, fishing, and ship-building. Seven schooners and fifteen sloops were owned on the Neek.

Previous to 1760, letters were suffered to accumulate at Portsmouth until there was a sufficient number to justify the expense, when they were sent forward by special messenger.

In the Revolution, the town suffered destruction for the third time. It appears that a tory, named Thomas Coulson, had imported, March 17, 1775, eertain merchandise, rigging and stores for a ship he had just built, which the Committee of Safety and Inspection decided, according to the agreement of the American Association, ought not to be used, and ordered their immediate return to England. Coulson, notwithstanding the commands of the committee, endeavored to carry out his original purpose, and at last, under the protection of the sloopof-war "Canseau," Capt. Mowett, succeeded in rigging his vessel and putting the goods on board. None of the populaee could be hired to assist in this, but were compelled to do so by Mowett. This and other acts of petty tyranny on his part, rendered Mowett so unpopular, that himself, his surgeon, and Rev. Mr. Wiswell, an Episeopal minister were, May 9th, made prisoners while on shore, by Col. Samuel Thompson, of Brunswick. This drew from the sailing master of the "Canseau," a threat to lay the town in ashes if the captain was not instantly released. They were not set at liberty, however, until nightfall, and then only upon pledge of re-appearance at nine o'clock the next morning. ett failed to appear, which so exasperated the people that they threatened to attack his vessel if he did not leave the harbor. Coulson's house was rifled, his boats injured by being drawn through the streets, and several parties thought to be in sympathy with him were ill-treated. The trouble ended for the time by the departure of Coulson's ship, with himself and Mowett on board, for Portsmouth. This, with perhaps one or two other eircumstances of less moment, so excited British ire, or perhaps more properly, so enraged Capt. Mowett, that he obtained from his superior officer an order for the destruction of Falmouth.

On Monday, the 16th of October following, the "Canseau," the "Cat," a ship-of-war, a large cutter schooner, and a small bomb-ship, were anchored about a league out, and the next day were towed up towards the wharves, and moored in line opposite the most compact part of the town. About four o'clock in the afternoon Mowett sent a messenger on shore with a letter full of hypocritical regrets for the "painful duty imposed upon him," and summing up that "on account of the bad behaviour of the inhabitants towards the mother country, he had been ordered to execute a just vengeance on the town of Falmouth," concluding with the statement that they could have just "two hours to remove themselves and whatever was valuable from its precincts."

A committee appointed by the citizens to learn the reason of such a summary proceeding got this satisfaction: "My orders I have received from Admiral Graves, and they direct me to repair to the place with all expedition, take my position near the town, and burn, sink and destroy, and this without giving the people warning! The note you have received is of special grace, and at the risk of my commission." The committee strove to delay the matter until the admiral could be consulted. This he agreed to, provided they would deliver to him certain munitions of war. By this means a little time was gained; but at a meeting in the morning the citizens rejected the terms, and in a final conference making known this fact, but pleading every claim of justice and humanity for further delay. Mowett brutally replied that he would give them "thirty minutes and no more." About nine o'clock on the morning of the 17th the firing commenced, and continued nine hours. What could not be done by the guns was accomplished by armed parties sent on shore, and the once thriving town, with the exception of the Congregational church, about one hundred dwellings of the poorer sort and a few wharves, was one mass of blackened ruins. St. Paul's church, the new court house, the town house, the public library, the fire-engine, 130 dwellings, 230 stores, and warehouses, a large number of stables and outhouses, and about onehalf the furniture, goods, and merchandise were destroyed.

One other visit was made by the British. Captain Symonds came in a large war ship soon after this act of destruction, and while the inhabitants were engaged in erecting forts for defence he ordered them to desist; but they paid no attention to him, and finding himself in danger of attack he made good his retreat.

Cape Elizabeth was incorporated from Falmouth Nov. 1, 1765; Portland, July 4th, 1786; and Westbrook, Feb. 14, 1814. Like all our scaports Portland suffered greatly in her commercial and shipbuilding interests during the troublous times of 1807 to 1815. The tonnage fell off 9,000 tons, and the amount of import duties fell from $342,909 to $41,369.

We come now, in this part of our sketch, to an event of recent occurrence, which Portland people will never forget. The Great Fire occurred July 4th and 5th, 1866. Starting from a burning fire-cracker flung by a boy's careless hand into a mass of rubbish, this magnificent conflagration — for every exhibition of unrestrained power is magnificent — swept with resistless force and almost uncontrolled freedom across the city, burying in ashes property to the amount of ten million dollars, destroying a building frontage of seventeen miles in length, and rendering houseless, homeless, and almost penniless twelve thousand people. More than fifteen hundred buildings were destroyed; every bank, every insurance office, every law office, every dry goods, and shoe and jewelry house, eight hotels, eight churches, four school-houses, more than one hundred manufacturing establishments, Brown's sugar house, eight stories high, and covering more than an acre of ground, the magnificent City Hall, Wood's Marble Hotel, unfinished, but which could not be replaced for a quarter of a million, the hall and cabinets of the Portland Society of Natural History, whose value cannot be reckoned in dollars—all these and many other elegant and costly buildings were in the track of the fiery monster, and fell victims to his insatiate maw.

The sight was sublime and awe-inspiring; the roaring flames leaping with whirlwind rapidity from point to point, the thick smoke shrouding the streets in lurid darkness, the crash of falling walls, the rumbling jar of some exploding mine, the hoarse shouts of the firemen, the flitting forms of frightened women and children, the men, pale, but brave and determined, struggling to snatch their cherished household goods from the very jaws of death, made up a scene which none who saw it can ever forget, and which they pray God they may never witness again. Many were the feats of individual prowess and daring in the almost hopeless attempt to save valuables, or check the progress of the fire. Nothing could be done except to confine it to as narrow a track as possible; and after an incessant fight of seventeen hours the fire fiend sank to rest from sheer exhaustion.

With commendable energy the City Government set to work to improve the width and general direction of the streets in the burnt district, and ere the stones and brick had become cool, better and more commodious buildings took the place of some that had been destroyed. But one thing, the peculiar pride and boast of Portland could not be so quickly replaced,—her magnificent shade trees, which had earned for her the well-merited name of "The Forest City." To replace these must be the slow work of years, but in buildings, both public and private, there has been in some respects a decided gain.

Du Monts, the great French navigator, explored the coast from the Bay of St. Lawrence to Cape Porpoise in 1603, and pronounced Portland harbor "the safest, the best, the most commodious, and the most accessible of any on the Atlantic coast east of Massachusetts." There is no condition of tide, no direction of wind, and no season of the year, when it is not a safe refuge from storms and boisterous weather. The water in the harbor is so deep and the tide rises so high that there is very seldom any obstruction from ice.

The business capacity of Portland is large, and her material interests are rapidly increasing. The Custom House business, reckoning exports and imports, has increased from $1,000,000 to $20,000,000. The population has increased during the same time from 20,000 to 32,500 estimated, and the valuation has risen from about $13,000,000, to, in 1868, $28,572,478.

There were of ships registered and enrolled, belonging to the District of Portland and Falmouth, Feb. 1, 1869, nineteen, aggregating 22,657 tons; forty-three barks, tonnage 21,258; fifty-five brigs, tonnage 16,947; one hundred and nineteen schooners, tonnage 11,368; thirty-five sloops, tonnage 1,250; sixty-six small vessels, tonnage 808; eighteen steamers, tonnage 8,880.

The import of molasses for the year 1868, reached to nearly seven million gallons (6,803,699). The sugar imports of the same year amounted to 10,518 hogsheads; 17,800 boxes. Number of arrivals, foreign, 591; coastwise, 745. Number of clearances, foreign, 691; coastwise, 655.

The facilities for communication with Portland are very good, both by sca and by land, and her enterprising citizens have projected numerous additional channels which will probably be perfected before long. There are ten steamship and packet lines which touch at Portland with more or less frequency and regularity, giving communication with Liverpool, Glasgow, Montreal, London, Boston, New York, Eastport, St. John, Bangor and Machias, Waldoboro', Halifax, and (proposed) Annapolis, Nova Scotia. The Cumberland and Oxford canal gives access to the interior to the distance of over fifty miles.

The railroads are the Grand Trunk, the Portland, Saco and Portsmonth, the Portland and Kennebec, the Androscoggin, and the Portland (horse). Besides these, there are three prominent lines projected; viz. the Portland and Rochester, partly built, designed to shorten the land route to New York; the Portland and Ogdensburg, designed to pass through the White Mountain Notch and thence to the foot of Lake Champlain, and thus shorten the distance to the Great West; and the Portland and Rutland, a rival in its main object to the Portland and Ogdensburg. One of these roads will undoubtedly be built before many years; perhaps both.

Of the more recent works of a public character and importance, the most important is the Portland Water Works. The water was let into the pipes in the autumn of 1869, and thus a great want is met. The water in bountiful supply is drawn from the beautiful Lake Schago, seventeen miles distant. This lake is of remarkable purity, of great depth, and, with its tributary lakelets, covers an area of more than one hundred square miles. Its surface is two hundred and sixty feet above tide water, while the highest land elevation within the city limits, Bramhall's Hill, is but one hundred and seventy-five feet and a half, so that there can never be any difficulty in supplying the highest buildings.

In the shipping interest there has recently been completed a large dry dock, four hundred feet long, one hundred wide, and it is to have eighteen feet of water on the gate sill at ordinary high tide. It is on the Cape Elizabeth side of the harbor, near Cape Elizabeth bridge. For a detailed list of the various manufacturing and business interests of Portland, we must refer to the Portland part of this book.

There are numerous scientific, literary and charitable institutions here, in which respect Portland will compare favorably with other cities. The Portland Society of Natural History was organized in 1843. Twice its collection has been destroyed by fire, first in 1854 and later in the great fire of 1866. It now occupies rooms in the City Hall.

The Mercantile Library Association lost its library of nearly 4,000 volumes in the great fire, but has since collected a new library of about 3,000 volumes. Its rooms are in Congress Hall block.

The Portland Horticultural Society devotes its attention, with marked success, to the improvement of flowers, fruits and vegetables.

The Portland Atheneum lost 12,000 volumes in the fire; their building has been reërected, but the library not yet renewed.

The Portland Institute and Public Library, was organized Jan. 22, 1867. Its privileges are obtainable by paying a small annual fee.

There is also a medical school, a medical society, and a law library.

Of charitable societies there are sixteen, some of them being general and others specific in object; fourteen Masonic Societies, five Lodges of Odd Fellows, and seventeen Temperance organizations.

There are thirty-one churches and church organizations: some of the church edifices are very fine structures.

Portland has two school-houses which cost $125,000 each, and other conveniences for educating the children are on a similarly liberal scale. The whole number of school-children is about 10,500. The amount appropriated for school purposes was $64,200.

STONE DRAIN AND WATER PIPE

North end of Deering's Bridge.

J. N. WINSLOW, Treas.

J. T. WINSLOW, Supt.

We desire to call the attention of the public, cities and corporations to the following report:—The figures given is the average pressure upon each square inch of the pipe.

OFFICE OF SUPERINTENDENT OF SEWERS, CITY HALL, BOSTON, Sept. 1, 1869.

Test of Portland Drain Pipe. 12 inch, 78 lbs. per square iuch. 10 inch, 120 lbs. per square inch. 8 inch, 103 lbs. per square inch.

6 inch, 130 lbs. per square inch. 4 inch, 255 lbs. per square inch.

Signed,

WM. H. BRADLEY.

It will be seen by the foregoing report that our Drain Pipe resists a pressure per square inch far greater than any other pipe manufactured, and it is also alike impervious to acids or other chemical agencies, and unaffected by the elements.

Glazed Stone Ware Pipes are used almost exclusively for sewerage purposes by all the large cities in this and foreign countries.

Our Pipes are of extra thickness. Equal to the best English imported. Warranted indestructible. Made from pure Fire Clay, and Glass coated.
